House Approves 500,000 - Acre Guayule Farms

WASHINGTON, Oct. 8.—(AP)—Advised that guayule promised to exceed expectations as a wartime source of natural rubber, the house quickly voted today to expand plantings of this shrub from 75,000 to 500,000 acres.

It approved a $19,000,000 appropriation for cultivation of guayule by the Agriculture Department on plantations in California, Arizona and New Mexico. The senate also must act on the appropriation.

While the house was acting, a senate agriculture subcommittee heard behind closed doors from Major Wendell Dove, of the Army, on the possibility of getting needed natural rubber from South America. Details of his testimony were not disclosed, but Chairman Gillette, Democrat, Iowa, declared the group received "ample evidence of ample supplies."

The prospects for larger-than-expected production of natural rubber, from the guayule shrub were disclosed with publication of the house appropriation committee of testimony from C. M. Granger, assistant chief of the Agriculture Department's Forest Service.

Asking for the $19,000,000 for quick expansion of guayule cultivation, Granger predicted that rubber production from this shrub would be 33,000 tons in the fall of 1944 instead of the 13,000 originally expected.

Granger also told the committee that experiments were continuing on the possibility of extracting rubber from goldenrod and "we may come before the committee with a proposal to plant 15,000 acres in goldenrod."

The quality of tires made from synthetic rubber was discussed in an appendix, issued during the day, to the report of the special rubber survey committee headed by Bernard M. Baruch. It said that Buna S, foundation of the huge synthetic program, was "particularly well adapted as a material for tires," and had 90 per cent of the wearing qualities of natural rubber.

However, officials have repeatedly emphasized that the ordinary motorist need not expect to be able to get synthetic tires in the early future. Military demands will take all synthetic rubber that is produced for months to come.

Surprise 2d Front Declared Impossible

By WILLIAM R. MATHEWS

Publisher of The Tucson, Ariz., Star.

DUBLIN, Ireland, Oct. 8.—(By Air Mail)—There can be no surprise 2d front in England or North Ireland, such as would be necessary to support an invasion of the continent, as long as the Irish are neutral.

It takes only a casual glance around Dublin and Ireland to see how the Germans can, with ordinary ingenuity, keep themselves informed about military matters in England and North Ireland. Moreover, they can do it, and are undoubtedly doing it, without openly violating the strict and correct neutrality that the government of Eire maintains toward them.

The Germans and the Italians have only small legations with staffs totaling eight and seven persons, respectively, while the Japanese have only a consulate general with two on the staff. But both the Italians and the Germans have many friends and sympathizers in Eire. The Italians can, through the normal means of communication and long established sympathies existing between the Vatican

Atlanta will have more warm weather again today, forecasters said last night. His official forecast was "mild temperatures Friday."

The high yesterday was 77 degrees, and the low was 52.

INDICTED—Waxey Gordon, a prohibition era baron, was indicted yesterday by a federal grand jury in New York on charges of violating sugar ration rules.

Waxey Gordon Indicted in Big Sugar Delivery

NEW YORK, Oct. 8.—(AP)—Waxey Gordon, big-shot of Broadway when beer and whiskey flowed from speakeasies, turned up on the Great White Way two years ago after serving seven years of a 10-year hitch in Leavenworth and said he was a new man, no more racketeering.

But the government thinks he must have been kidding. Today Gordon (real name Irving Wexler) was right back behind Uncle Sam's eight ball accused in a federal indictment of trying to cash in on the wartime sugar shortage.

Specifically, he and a pal, Simon Hirschberg, were charged with conspiracy to violate an Office of Price Administration regulation governing the sale of sugar. The government said they used a soft drink firm—Vita Cola—as a "blind" for a black market in sugar.

"The old-time bootleggers are sadly mistaken if they think that the rationing laws afford a profitable hunting ground for profit," said U. S. Attorney Mathias Correa. "They will find that aiding the enemy is neither popular nor profitable."

Late in the afternoon Gordon, accompanied by his attorney, surrendered voluntarily in the office of Correa. Hirschberg was arrested in the Broadway offices of a neckwear firm in which authorities said he was a partner.

Both defendants were released after posting $5,000 bail. Oscar L. Hausner, a resident of the Bronx who recently pleaded guilty to a federal charge of delivering 30,000 pounds of sugar to two customers who did not furnish ration certificates, was named a co-conspirator but not a defendant.

Correa said Gordon and Hirschberg had a financial interest in Hausner's Vita Cola firm, which manufactured a soft drink syrup. The prosecutor added that through his firm Hausner obtained 50 certificates entitling him to 10,000 pounds of sugar which alcohol tax investigators later found in a truck which they recognized as one previously seized by the government and auctioned.

Gordon was released in November, 1940, from Leavenworth prison, where he was imprisoned for conviction on charges of evading taxes on his illegal beer and narcotics income.

'Fullest' Help Is Pledged to Reds by Welles

BOSTON, Oct. 8.—(AP)—Acting Secretary of State Sumner Welles declared tonight that the surest way to defeat Germany is to aid Russia and pledged "the fullest measure of every means of help."

Paying high tribute to the Soviet's "epic and successful resistance" in an address prepared for the National Foreign Trade convention, Welles mentioned both the sending of arms and the opening of a second front as possible means of aid.

"Whether the assistance be through the furnishing of arms, equipment or supplies," he said, "or whether that assistance be by means of the diversion of German armies forced upon Hitler through the creation of a new theater of operations, the fullest measure of every means of help will be given."

"The surest way to insure the defeat of Hitler is to give this help, and to give it unstintingly at the earliest possible moment."

Welles said he was "not one of those few who believe that we are losing this war" and that Americans have a right to be proud of their country's record since Pearl Harbor. "They are heartened," he added, by the fact that most of the American republics have either joined in the war on our side or severed all relations with the Axis.

Argentina and Chile, however, still are permitting their neighbors to be "stabbed in the back by Axis emissaries" operating from their territory, said the acting secretary, but it is inconceivable that they will permit this much longer.

"People's Peace" Foreseen. Welles warned that "the unity which the free peoples have achieved to win their war must continue on to win their peace. For since this is in truth a people's war, it must be followed by a people's peace."

Planning now for that peace not only does not detract from our war effort, he said, but it is essential.

Merchant Seaman Is Decorated By Roosevelt for Heroism

Award of First Medal 'Historical Occasion'

WASHINGTON, Oct. 8.—(AP)—The first medal awarded for heroism in the Merchant Marine during the war was pinned by President Roosevelt today on the coat lapel of Edwin F. Cheney Jr., a slender, 25-year-old seaman from Yeadon, Pa.

"This is really an historical occasion," Mr. Roosevelt remarked. "There are going to be more of them. It recognizes a form of valor that is just as essential as valor on a fighting ship."

Cheney was quartermaster, at the wheel of the Atlantic Refining Company tanker John D. Gill when it was torpedoed March 12. He released a life raft from the sinking, burning vessel and maneuvered it through burning oil to clear water by swimming under water and coming up only to breathe.

His citation for the medal said: "Although he had incurred severe burns about the face and arms in this action, he then guided four of his shipmates to the raft and swam to and rescued two others who were injured and unable to help themselves. His extraordinary courage and disregard of his own safety in thus rescuing his shipmates will be an enduring inspiration to seamen of the United States Merchant Marine everywhere."

The seaman, who is married and the father of a five-day-old son, Bob, obviously was embarrassed at the White House ceremony, but Mr. Roosevelt promptly put him at ease.

Cheney, who was on a second torpedoed tanker after a heroic exploit, was ready to go back to sea when he received word that a special committee had selected him, of all American merchant seamen, to receive the first Merchant Marine Medal.

Nazis Propose To Destroy City With Artillery

By The Associated Press.
German military spokesmen acknowledged last night that they had lost hope of occupying all of Stalingrad by storm, and while Soviet reports continued to tell of ferocious tank and infantry fighting in one factory outskirts, the Nazis intimated their shock troops soon would be spared and heavy artillery depended upon to lay waste to the city.

Moscow's midnight communique said the Germans had lost four infantry battalions and 16 out of 50 tanks in occupying two streets of the factory district.

However, these particulars contained in Soviet communiques frequently are hours and even days behind actual developments.

Prussian Troops Diverted. The Germans, who had strengthened their embryo winter line across the steppe northwest of Stalingrad with elite Prussian troops diverted from the city area, apparently were making a great effort to weaken the force of the Soviet relief offensive against this flank.

In some sectors they were counterattacking against the Red relief armies, Moscow said. The curious German announcements, coming at the end of 45 days of battle at shocking cost in men and machines, were interpreted by some London military men as meaning that Hitler was preparing for winter that his plans might cover the possible eventual withdrawal from all the city area.

First Phase Over. By their own language, the Germans conceded that the first great phase of the battle was over.

The Germans gave general circulation to their plan for leveling the fortified factories of Stalingrad after they have occupied "strategic" sections, identified as the "heart" of the city and penetration up to the Volga river.

"The fight for Stalingrad has changed," the broadcasts began. They went on to say that "after the actual (strategic) objective has been arrived at, it is of no importance when the moment arrives that the resistance has been overcome in the great factories."

"The remainder of the city need not be stormed by infantry and sappers but can be laid in ruins systematically by heavy and heaviest artillery."

Like Rostov Communiqué. Perhaps purposely the broadcasts made it unclear whether the Germans considered that the "strategic objective" already had been achieved. The broadcasts were susceptible of various interpretations, some of them perhaps dangerously wishful. However, they bore somewhat of a similarity to the Rostov communique of a year ago, when the Germans announced strategic withdrawal from the city at the mouth of the Don after ruthlessly punishing the civilian population for alleged franc tireur activities.

It was possible that Thursday's broadcasts were leading up to something similar at Stalingrad.

Deep But Stalled. So far as can be ascertained, the Germans are fairly deep in western and northern sections of Stalingrad, but there they are stalled.

The progress of their reinforcements, moving in from the Don bend, has been increasingly hampered by the Soviet relief offensive from the northwest.

Therefore, the "change" in the battle announced Thursday certainly indicated this:

(1) The Germans find it too difficult to move enough men and tanks into the city to take it before winter, and they are going to concentrate on strengthening their barrier between the Don and Volga, making it a real winter line.

(2) No longer will great forces of infantry be expended within the city—it will be left to the siege guns and snipers.

Already the German northern barricade is a series of entrenchments, blindages, blockhouses and improvised pillboxes made out of disabled tanks dug into the hard soil of the steppe.

Steel Company, Scrap - Getting Pupils Keep On 'Hired Help' Officials Dizzy

By LAMAR Q. BALL.
War was threatened yesterday between Samuel B. Freedman, president of the Special Steel Compounding Corporation, of Newark, N. J.—in this case—

and the Empire State of Georgia—in that case—

Before the actual shelling starts, Freedman has made diplomatic representations to President Roosevelt, the War Production Board as a unit, Donald Nelson as an individual in charge of the War Production Board, and to promote special interest in his case, he has wired all the congressmen in New Jersey.

Freedman is protesting the arrest and $1,000 fine of one of his labor representatives who had been trying to hire 11 Negroes in Cordele to quit their Georgia jobs and go to work in the plant of the Special Steel Compounding Corporation in Newark, N. J.

The Special Steel Compounding Corporation is an elaborate name for a firm that processes the "scrap iron" that is being collected throughout America today. After it is processed, it is turned over to the Crucible Steel Company, in near-by Harrison, N. J.

The firm, says Freedman, has fallen behind in its deliveries to Crucible Steel and Harold G. Weston, personnel manager, had been sent out over the nation to bring additional labor into the plant.

At Cordele, Ga., Weston ran afoul of the law. After being arrested and admitting that he had hired 11 Negroes from farms adjacent to Cordele, he was fined $1,000, a courtesy he was permitted in lieu of serving 12 months on a Georgia prison farm and six months in a Georgia jail.

The diplomatic overtures Freedman was making to President Roosevelt yesterday were in protest against the fine and the humiliation and the interruption of a defense project. Judge O. T. Gover, of Cordele, who assessed the fine, said the Georgia's enthusiastic army of children is getting way ahead of officials in the three-week campaign to collect scrap for the newspapers' scrap drive.

So many have collected 100 pounds of scrap in the first week of the drive that the supply of badges cannot keep up with the demand.

Thousands of the red, white and blue badges already have been distributed to the schools in Fulton and DeKalb counties for members of the "100 Scrap Metal Club," but more are needed.

A hurry-up order has been sent the factory where the badges were bought, but it may be several days before a new supply can be sent here, officials of the drive were told.

A misunderstanding about how long the school drive would last also has caused confusion. The drive will end October 24. It is three-week campaign.

At the end of that period, the $1,000 in cash prizes given by The Constitution and Journal for the schools getting the most scrap per pupil in Decatur, Atlanta, DeKalb and Fulton will be awarded.

The Emory Wheel, Emory University publication, started its own campaign among students as a part of the newspapers' drive. Goal at the university is 5,000

Five Enemy Vessels Damaged in Assault

WASHINGTON, Oct. 8.—(AP)—An aircraft carrier task force, striking violently into the heart of Japan's defense area in the North Solomon islands, has damaged an enemy heavy cruiser and four other ships, destroyed eight aircraft and blasted an airfield, the Navy announced tonight.

The operation, conducted in unfavorable weather, apparently caught the Japanese completely by surprise at one of their most vulnerable points. It was carried through without the loss of a man or plane and without damage to any ship.

A Navy communique, reporting the action, said that the ships attacked were in the Shortland Island area, just south of the island of Bougainville, which is the main Japanese base in the Solomons. The airfield attacked was Kieta, on the northern coast of Bougainville, 45 miles north of Shortland.

For several weeks, the communique said, enemy ships had been observed concentrating in the Shortland area. This was authoritatively interpreted to mean that a great armada was massing there, but that on frequent occasions large numbers of enemy vessels put in. These probably were engaged in the work of supplying and reinforcing enemy troops on Guadalcanal island, site of the main American base 259 miles to the south, as well as on Japanese islands near by.

On October 5, the carrier task force under general direction of Vice Admiral R. L. Ghormley, Navy chief in the South Pacific, moved in to the attack, which was coordinated with attacks on other Japanese centers in the southwest Pacific by heavy bombers from the Australian command of General Douglas MacArthur.

Cruiser Damaged. The communique reported that these results were observed: One cruiser and one transport damaged by heavy bombs. One seaplane tender and two cargo ships damaged by light bombs. One cruiser and one destroyer strafed in Shortland harbor. The Navy did not claim these as "damaged."

Four four-engine flying boats destroyed on the water at Kieta and six damaged by strafing. Kieta is a little island in Shortland harbor.

Two seaplanes and two bombers destroyed. Meanwhile, apparently in a maneuver designed to prevent Japanese counterattack by air from the field at Kieta, other planes struck there and damaged the field with bombs.

It appeared significant that the communique did not describe any damage inflicted by plane-borne torpedoes. The assumption here was that the weather, which the communique merely described as "unfavorable," was so bad that the torpedo planes either could not get in their work or else results were not observed. Shortland island, where the Japanese ship concentration was blasted, is a densely wooded point of land lying just south of Bougainville. Kieta, where the flying boats were attacked, is a small island in the western part of Shortland harbor and separated from Shortland island only by a deep narrow channel.

From the northwestern coast of Guadalcanal island, the main American base in the Solomons, to Kieta is a distance of 300 nautical miles. Kieta lies 45 miles north of Shortland, while Shortland is about 259 miles from Guadalcanal.

The relatively short distances among these various islands indicate that the enemy ship concentrations in the vicinity of Shortland probably were made for the purpose of facilitating the Japanese land and air attacks against American holdings in Guadalcanal. The communique gave no information about the situation on Guadalcanal itself. The latest report on that situation was issued by the Navy last Tuesday when it was disclosed that the enemy had succeeded in landing troop reinforcements, obviously for the purpose of organizing a new effort to capture the American airfield.

Prisoner Here Faces Trial in Mississippi

Earl Edward Kent Loses Long Fight on Removal.

At long last Earl Edward Kent is able to turn his back on prisons in Georgia.

But he will be escorted by a United States deputy marshal back to Mississippi, there to answer in federal court more government charges.

Federal Judge E. Marvin Underwood ordered Kent returned to Mississippi authorities yesterday after a summer of legal wrangling. United States Marshal Charles H. Cox will see to his safe arrival.

Kent was released from federal prison here after a habeas corpus hearing last July.

Hardly had he cleared the prison gates, however, before the long arm of the federal law reached out and grabbed him. He was lodged in Fulton tower while defense attorneys fought efforts by the government to get him back to Mississippi for a new trial.

Soon after he landed in Fulton Tower, Kent came up with another habeas corpus hearing and the court ordered him discharged after a 15-day period. Federal authorities in Mississippi, however, showed up with a detainer and back to jail went Kent.

All during the summer Kent languished in jail while the court sifted through 10 habeas corpus and removal hearings. Yesterday's action squared his count here, although he lost. If he loses again in Mississippi, he may come back and start all over.

effort but actually contributes to the drive toward victory, he said.

"The setting-up, now, of efficient machinery to deal with such problems as relief and rehabilitation, for example, which will accompany victory, cannot fail to strengthen the resolve of all liberty-loving peoples, including those in areas now occupied by the enemy, to bring the conflict to the speediest possible conclusion; it cannot fail to make them realize that the sort of world for which we are striving is worth the sacrifice of war; it is worth the cost of victory."

Task Enormous.
The task of postwar relief will be enormous, he continued, for much of the world will be "impoverished beyond anything known in modern times."

Eventually, however, the devastated areas must be self-supporting, with the aid of "enormous shipments from abroad, both of capital goods and of the raw materials of industry," shipments for which "no immediate means of payment will be visible."

That means large financing, much of it long-term, he said, requiring co-operative action by the United Nations, until payment can be made both for interest on loans and for current purchases of raw materials and other imports.

Pay in Goods, Services.
"I need not tell this audience," said Welles, "that international payments on that scale can be made only in goods and services. There is no other way. . . . Those who expect to export must take the world's goods and services in payment. I hope the United States is ready, now, to act on that lesson."

Without naming Argentina and Chile, who still maintain diplomatic relations with the Axis powers, Welles observed that two American republics "are still permitting their territory to be utilized by the officials and the subversive agents of the Axis as a base for hostile activities against their neighbors."

As a result of reports on ship movements sent out by those agents, he said, ships and nationals of Brazil, Cuba, Mexico, Colombia, Uruguay, Argentina, Chile, Panama, the Dominican Republic and the United States have been lost through enemy attacks in Western Hemisphere waters.

"But I cannot believe," he added, "that these two republics will continue long to permit their brothers and neighbors of the Americas, engaged as they are in a life and death struggle to preserve the liberties and the integrity of the New World, to be stabbed in the back by Axis emissaries operating in the territory, and under the free institutions, of these two republics of the Western Hemisphere."

CHUNGKING, China, Oct. 8.—(AP)—A Chinese army spokesman reported today that Japan and the Japanese-sponsored Chinese regime at Nanking had signed a secret treaty whose provisions included a long-term lease for the Japanese for the island of Hainan. ## Atlantans Warned To Keep Autos in Garages

Warning that an ever-increasing number of automobiles is found stripped of tires and even motors, Detective Superintendent J. A. McKibben last night urged Atlantans to get every car off the streets at night and into a locked garage.

"The thieves operate after midnight," Superintendent McKibben said. "They usually don't bother cars in garages, but we have noticed a marked increase in the number of machines and tires being stolen from the streets."

Police have under observation several suspects believed to have been connected with an auto theft ring, he added.

"We haven't had any evidence yet that the ring is connected outside of Atlanta," McKibben said. "From what we can gather, the ring is composed of local men who have found some outlet for stolen goods."

Joe E. Brown's Son Dies in Crash

LONG BEACH, Cal., Oct. 8.—(AP)—Captain Don E. Brown, 25, son of Actor Joe E. Brown, was killed today in the crash of an Army bomber near Palm Springs. The Army Ferrying Command said Captain Brown was on a routine flight from the Long Beach air base to Utah when the crash occurred. Brown only recently was promoted to a captaincy, after having been commissioned a second lieutenant in the Air Forces July 11, 1941.

Several cars reported stolen in Atlanta have been found in the north Georgia mountains, stripped of tires, motors and other parts, he continued. Several of the bodies had been set on fire to burn off identification marks.

In many instances, persons who left their cars parked on the streets awoke the following morning to find tires, batteries and gasoline gone.

"We are doing everything possible in the police department to stamp out the stealing," McKibben went on. "But everyone who parks his car on the streets at night can help by finding a place where the machine can be stored behind lock and key."

The detective superintendent attributed the recent increase in tire and auto stealing to the growing shortage of tires and gasoline and to "the citizens who will risk buying obviously stolen goods rather than give up riding when their tires give out or their car breaks down."

Senate Votes 52-34 In Refusing To Tax Local, State Bonds

WASHINGTON, Oct. 8.—(AP)—The senate, voting 52 to 34, refused to tax the income from future issues of state and municipal securities today after an extended debate which stressed assertions that such an impost would violate state rights and produce insignificant revenues.

In making its decision, the senate for the first time in its consideration of the new wartime tax bill disregarded the recommendation of its finance committee.

The vote, however, brought it to the point of discussing one of the bill's major controversies, the committee's proposal for a five per cent victory tax on all individual incomes in excess of $624, with additional credits for insurance premiums, debt payments and other fixed obligations. The tax would be levied in addition to the usual normal tax and surtax.

A decision on this issue went over until tomorrow, with members of the finance committee predicting that the senate would approve. Several amendments were pending, one in particular by Senator Downey, Democrat, California, to exempt the first $1,200 from the victory tax, the second $1,200 at 5 per cent, and all above $2,400 at 10 per cent.

The senate spent virtually a full day debating the issue of the tax exempt bonds of the states and municipalities—long a touchy issue.

"I stand here," asserted Senator Smith, Democrat, South Carolina, to keep inviolate if I can the right of the states to exercise their immemorial power to attend to their own affairs and not to be over-lorded by a great central government."

Senator Austin, Republican, Vermont, asserted that to tax the income from such securities would endanger the borrowing function of the states and municipalities. "Their ability to borrow is necessary to their life," he said. Senator Connally, Democrat, Texas, made the point that since only the income from future issues were to be taxed the revenue yield would be insignificant.

Chairman George, Democrat, Georgia, of the finance committee, said he had no serious doubt the supreme court would hold that congress has the power to tax state and municipal bonds.

"Whether it is wise to do so is a debatable question," George said. "I cannot believe it is wrong. And that to my mind is the big question."

"It isn't going to break down the business machine to tax income from every source from which men derive it. It isn't going to break down the states and municipalities."

Hospital Plan Scrutinized At Barbecue

City Leaders Also Study Means To Extend Limits.

Mayor Hartsfield, members of city council and city department heads, last night discussed operation of Fulton and DeKalb county hospital facilities under the hospital authority, authorized at the last session of the Georgia assembly, and methods of extending the limits of Atlanta, at a barbecue held at Lakewood.

H. J. Cates, president of the Association of Administrative Department Heads of the city, which was host to the mayor and council, presided over the sessions from which the public and newspapermen were barred.

Discussions were reported to have been general and informative and no policy was proposed or adopted.

Five Canadian Warships Aided In Andreanofs

Co-operation of Naval Force With U. S. Revealed in Ottawa.

OTTAWA, Oct. 8.—(AP)—Navy Minister Angus Macdonald announced tonight that a Canadian naval force of five warships co-operated with the United States force which effected the recent landing in the Aleutian Islands.

Macdonald said he could give no further details because of security reasons.

The United States Navy announced in Washington October 3 that positions in the Andreanof group of islands in the Aleutians had been occupied, without opposition, by American armed troops with naval support. The date and the extent of the operation was not announced, although it was said it happened "recently."

It was known previously that Canadian airmen have been taking part in operations against the Japanese in the Aleutian area. It was also made known previously that Canadian warships have been working with American naval units in the Aleutian area.

In reporting that a Canadian naval force had its share in the operation, Macdonald added that it was but another instance of how Canadian forces are co-operating with other forces of the United Nations.

"We have reason to be proud," he said, "of the work which our Navy has been doing in the Atlantic ever since the first day of war. It has been both defensive and offensive, defending our coasts and our convoys and taking offensive action against the enemy whenever our ships could contact him."

"Now we have taken our part in an offensive action in the Pacific, have had our share in seizing the initiative from the Japanese and co-operating in a move which will put the United Nations in better positions to attack them."

Stabilization of Manpower in Present Jobs Is U. S. Goal.

By INEZ ROBB. Copyright, 1942, by International News Service.

or, around the corner where wages are frozen at a higher level." As to rental ceilings on business buildings, he said:

"At the moment, rent ceilings apply only to dwellings. But it is patent that what the grocer pays in rent must affect the prices he charges and his own margin of profit."

"I have just heard of two increases in business rentals in New York as of October 1. One increase in rent amounted to 38 per cent and the other to 40 per cent."

"In the meantime, I am trying to find out if the law can be applied to business properties as well as to dwellings."

"If the law cannot be so applied, I will ask congress to amend the law to apply to all property."

Civil Air Patrol Announces Formation of Cadet Corps

Formation of a young people's volunteer aviation corps, to be known as the Civil Air Patrol Cadets, was announced yesterday by James M. Landis, director of the Office of Civilian Defense. The organization will parallel that of the Civil Air Patrol.

With an active wing command in each of the 48 states, the CAP acts both as an aerial home guard and as a reservoir for the recruitment and training of civilian volunteers to be assigned to active missions such as the antisubmarine patrol. Thousands of trained and disciplined airmen also have gone from the patrol into the armed forces, the ferrying command, the aviation schools and the aircraft industry.

The purpose of the CAPC is to extend the same opportunity for training, under the guidance of seasoned airmen, to younger age level. Membership in the cadets will be limited to native-born students in the last or next to the last year of senior high school.

These young civilian volunteers will not be assigned to flying duties, but on completion of their cadets training and graduation from high school, they will be eligible for full membership in the patrol, where 18 is the minimum age for flying assignments.

So said Western Union's A. N. Williams, the hard-bitten, bustling railroad president whom W. U. took for its president a little more than a year ago.

Here yesterday with other company officials on an inspection tour, President Williams gave off a few day-letter length paragraphs on his problems.

In two hours last week his London office received 27,000 messages. That isn't unusual. When a convey arrives the boys all with the soldier-rate messages to send folks at home a cable.

200,000,000 Wires.

By the end of the year W. U. will have handled 200,000,000 messages. Some of them are long. A few days ago in Washington he saw one which contained 2,929 words and which was going to 98 different offices.

In one day Washington's government offices may file as many as 571,000 words. (They did that one day last week.) That is equal to a novel about the length of "Gone With the Wind."

War messages come first. So, said W. U.'s president, if your own service isn't as good as it was, you must remember those 517,000 words out of one city.

He discontinued messenger service when companies began to hire messengers by the whole day and when he learned they were being sent on errands for ice cream and to stand in line and buy railroad tickets.

Hires Only Women. He was short of boys anyhow. Now he hires only women, for jobs other than delivering messages, and even there he is using many girls. If you can walk you can likely get a messenger job.

He is ready to merge with Postal when the law is ready authorizing it.

Traveling with him were Newcomb Carlton, chairman of the board and dean of telegraph officials; W. C. Tiley, vice president; B. D. Barnett, vice president; of New York, and A. C. McKahan, division superintendent from Chicago.

Business went on as usual Wednesday in the station, but the kitchen in the cafe was put out of commission. It is understood that the place was insured.

Surprise Party for CAP Chief Amazing Success—What a Relief

By AL SHARP.

Having a surprise party for Captain Lion G. Mason, commander of the north Georgia group of the Civil Air Patrol, was as full of surprises for the surprisers as it was for the surprisee.

And if that's not clear—what said it was?—why just get an idea of what happened.

Mason, who has an aviation supply company at the airport, had a birthday on Monday last. That was the day the party had been planned by his employees and associates. But Mason was in Chicago.

So the party was postponed until Wednesday night. Then Mason came in all aflutter. "Work, work, work," quoth he. "We've got to work tonight." Then he called home to say he wouldn't be there for dinner; he was going to work late.

The surprisers held a conference. Something had to be done. They had to get Mason away from the office so they could make arrangements for the party. As for work—well, they weren't thinking about it.

Leo S. Bosarge, squadron commander, was called in. "You'll have to do something about it," groaned the surprisers. Bosarge, never one to fail in a pinch, said: "Okay, it shall be done."

Boldly he telephoned Mason. "You must be here at 6:30 Broad street at 6 o'clock," Bosarge informed him.

Then Bosarge repeated. "What am I going to tell him? Why must he be here?" Bosarge was talking to himself by then. "He'll never forgive me if I don't have something important to see him about."

Finally, he passed the buck, too. A newspaper photographer was called to the rescue. Captain Mason didn't know that picture was being taken as a delaying action.

Bosarge then made Mason take him to the Hangar hotel for dinner. The surprisers ambushed them.

Surprisingly and otherwise, the party was a big success.

Soldier Spends Furlough on Georgia Farm

SPECIAL TO THE CONSTITUTION.

WASHINGTON, Ga., Oct. 8.—Joe Stephens, a soldier from Keesler Field, Miss., on a 20-day leave, was standing on a street corner here trying to catch a ride toward his home in Philadelphia, when DeLeon Reynolds stopped his car and asked Joe to ride out to his home near Washington to have dinner with him. On the way out, Farmer Reynolds spoke feelingly of the shortage in farm labor.

Mrs. Reynolds is a renowned housekeeper, and after dinner, Stephens timidly suggested that he spend a week with Mr. and Mrs. Reynolds to help gather the crop! He is up every morning at dawn, and early to bed and throughout the days he has been working along with Mr. Reynolds to get in the hay. He has even tried his hand at milking and Schoolboy Jimmy Reynolds reports that he is pretty good.

Throughout the state the scrap piles were growing. At Savannah a 30-year-old X-ray machine, one of the first made after the discovery of X-ray, was tossed on the scrap heap. The dusty old machine was given by Dr. Walter Norton.

The Georgia State Fair, at Macon, was gunning for plenty of scrap with its offer of free admission to any one turning in 100 pounds of metal. A mule and wagon will be used to collect the piles of scrap from Fraternity row and other buildings.

While the kids continued their enthusiastic drive to dig up old metal, rubber and rags, the industrial division went into high gear with a plant-to-plant canvass. Contacts will be made through regular sales channels, War Production Board officials explained at a luncheon for industrialists.

chant Marine Distinguished Service Medal.

Mr. Roosevelt fumbled with the medal's clasp, protesting: "They are all this way. They are terrible."

The chief executive turned the medal over to Admiral Emory S. Land, war shipping administrator. Remarking that "I still can't get the damn thing undone," Land failed, and finally Vice Admiral Arthur F. Fairchild, retired, coordinator of ship defense installations for the Maritime Commission, did the job.

The medal is a 16-pointed star appearing on a compass card, the star surmounted with an eagle and crossed anchors and suspended by a red, white and blue ribbon. The gold medal is accompanied by a gold rosette bearing the same basic design.

Remarking that Cheney would not want the medal flapping around, Mr. Roosevelt informed him he could wear the rosette all the time. Cheney was born in Scotia, N. Y.

Marine Bombed, Pitchforked, Knifed By Japs--Lives

(The following account of action in the Solomon Islands, distributed by the Associated Press, was written by a Marine Corps correspondent in the combat zone.)

By SERGEANT RICHARD T. WRIGHT.

A U. S. OUTPOST SOMEWHERE IN THE SOUTH PACIFIC, Sept. 12.—(Delayed)—Private First Class Eugene Oliver Moore, U. S. M. C., is living on borrowed life.

Sixty-five Japs trapped him in his tank on Gavutu Island, ripped open the hatch, threw hand grenades into it, and set it on fire.

Smoke and fumes forced Moore out of the tank after the other crew members had been killed. The Japs grabbed him, knocked him down, kicked him, jabbed him with a pitchfork, knifed him, then picked him up and bounced him off the side of the tank.

State Pension Allotments for Quarter Up

Expenditures for Other Departments Also Show Gain for Period.

Old-age pension allotments in Georgia have been increased more than $250,000 for the last quarter of 1942 as against the third quarter and $676,228 over the same quarter a year ago, according to budgets approved yesterday by Governor Talmadge.

The allotment for the three months which started October 1 was $2,500,000. The allotment for the three months starting July 1 was $2,235,906 and the allotment for the last quarter of 1941 was $1,823,772.

Expenditures approved for all departments, except the highway and education departments, totaled $4,083,814 for the current quarter compared to $3,360,743 in the corresponding quarter last year and $3,704,348 in the previous quarter. State Auditor B. E. Thrasher Jr., in announcing the figures, said the total would have been less than last year except for the increase provided for pension payments. Early last month the Governor directed the Welfare Department to expand the pension rolls by adding all eligible persons who had applications pending on June 30.

The highway and education departments, which have not yet submitted budgets for the current quarter, require more funds than any other state agencies.

JAPS THOUGHT HIM DEAD—Private Eugene Moore, Marine Corps private who was grenaded, pitchforked, knifed, beaten and left for dead when the Japs swarmed over his tank in the Solomons, is shown recovering at a U. S. outpost in the South Pacific, as his superior officers visit to offer their congratulations on his miraculous escape.

knew one of them would, sooner or later, and was ready for him. I shot him right between the eyes.

"About this time the tank commander ordered the driver to move up the beach. The tank jumped ahead a few feet and we realized that they had put a brace between the 'wheels. I poked a submachinegun outside the tank and started firing, but they cleared away.

"Suddenly there was a terrific explosion and I saw the tank commander go down—then I felt a burning pain in my neck and realized they must have thrown a grenade down the turret. A few moments later they set fire to the tank. The smoke and fumes were terrific, and the driver and I figured it was better to get outside the tank and get shot rather than burn to death. So the driver poked his head outside the front hatch. They shot him.

"I figured it was better to go out feet first. So I piled out the tank and one of them helped me along. I remember one of them climbed on my back and started wallowing my head. They were banging me all around the place and I was bleeding and everyone of them was trying either to kick me, punch me or knife me and about that time I passed out. When I came to, they had me in the naval shack which served as a hospital.

"I had a hole in my crash helmet so large that I couldn't get it back on my head. I suppose it saved my life.

"Incidentally, they stole twenty dollars from me and it made me plenty mad."

While Moore's tank was under siege, Private Kenneth Koon, of Summitville, Ind., was some distance away sniping at the attackers. Private Koon, also among the wounded here, was an eyewitness to the entire action, and is credited with picking off more than 30 of the Japs. This is his story:

"Somehow I had gotten ahead of my platoon and was forced to take cover by snipers. Up ahead was a bomb shelter and beyond it a Jap pill box. I saw a Marine Corps tank coming lumbering up from the beach, heading for the pill box, and at the same time a howling herd of Japs came pouring out of the bomb shelter.

"They threw a brace in the wheels and stopped the tank and then swarmed all over it. During this time I was banging away with my rifle and several times, I am convinced, I got two Japs with one shot. They were so intent upon getting the guys in the tank that they didn't notice their men going down.

"Dead or Supermen."

"I could see one Jap on top of the tank with a pitchfork, jamming it down the turret and trying to get at the Marines inside. Several others were brandishing long knives, but they didn't seem to be getting to first base. Finally one of them threw a hand grenade into the tank. I figured the Marines were down after that, since there was a pretty big explosion, but I kept firing and they kept dropping.

"They still couldn't get inside, since the men were evidently alive, so they got some gasoline, threw it on the tank and set fire to it. The tank started burning, and throwing up big clouds of smoke, and I was wondering whether the guys inside were dead or supermen.

"Never Such a Beating."

"I saw one of them come out, and they promptly shot him. Another Marine (this was Moore, I later learned), came out the front hatch, and in all my life I have never seen one man take such a beating.

"They kicked him in the face and stomach, they pulled his hair, smashed him with their fists, jabbed him with a pitchfork, knifed him, and one of them got him by the arms and another by the legs, and bounced him off the tank. They finally moved away from the tank and let him lie where he was.

"After I was brought back to the naval shack that night, my lieutenant informed me that he personally counted 31 dead Japs around the tank.

"After the Japs left the tank they took off toward the pill box," Private Koon went on. "I headed for the bomb shelter. I took two steps and one of the snipers nailed me in the leg.

Under Fire All Night.

"I finally made the bomb shelter. If there had been anyone inside I wouldn't be here today. I lay there for six hours until some Marines found me. We lay there all night with bullets whipping through the shack and let me tell you, brother, it was hell. My pal over there was wounded while crawling up on the roof to get a shot at the snipers.

"Jap snipers with rifles and machineguns were strapped in the trees and hiding in empty oil drums and caves, and they caused more trouble than anything else.

"We were the first wave to hit Gavutu, and went zig-zagging up the beach to form a skirmish line. A buddy of mine was running beside me, and just before we hit the deck they got him in the chest.

"From that point on I was so mad I couldn't see straight."

AFL Favors All Possible Aid to Russia

TORONTO, Oct. 8.—(AP)—The American Federation of Labor made clear today that it favored all aid to Russia short of direct association with the Soviet trade unions and that the time for a second front must be entrusted exclusively to military experts.

President William Green expressed the general views in response to the appeals of two fraternal delegates from the British Trades Union Congress, silver-haired Jack Tanner, outspoken Russian sympathizer and president of the richest union in the world, the Amalgamated Engineering Union, and Bryan Roberts, who gave the delegates a dramatic picture of bombed Britain. The convention also voted "unqualified support" of the American Federation of Musicians in its conflict with record and broadcasting companies and the anti-trust division of the U. S. Department of Justice.

Without referring specifically to the AFL executive council's decision to maintain only an indirect relationship with Soviet unions, through the British, Green nevertheless underlined that action, declared that the officers and members of the federation were "discriminating, analytical men," and that totalitarianism and dictatorship were synonymous terms.

"Totalitarianism is repugnant to our democratic ideals and convictions, no matter in what form it is presented," Green said. "Let it be totalitarianism practiced and preached by Hitler in Germany or the Fascism preached by 'Charlie McCarthy' Benito Mussolini in Italy, or the totalitarianism preached by any other dictator in any other country; we are against it all." The delegates applauded his statement.

Green declared the heroism of the Russian people has "challenged our admiration" and it was the AFL policy to give to the Soviet Union "full and complete measure of support."

On the subject of a second front, the AFL chief said "We react favorably" to the suggestion for undertaking that offensive.

Mechanic Tests For City Jobs Will Be Given

Performance Ratings for Candidates Set Wednesday.

Speed, accuracy and effectiveness of about a dozen candidates for city jobs as automobile mechanics will be tested in performance ratings to be given at 6 o'clock next Wednesday at the city garage, Stafford W. Graydon, city personnel director, announced yesterday.

Expert mechanics will rig machinery at the garage for seven major performance tests, and all candidates for jobs will be graded on the time needed and on the performance of machinery after the task is completed. All those seeking jobs will get a chance at all the tests in order that they can be graded for comparative performance.

The tests, being arranged under the joint co-operation of Graydon and R. B. Jett, superintendent of the city garage, will include engine work, assembly of carburetors, proper function of ignition and generators and others. It will require about five hours for a good mechanic to pass all the tests. Those entitled to take the performance tests already have passed written examinations to qualify for additional examinations.

U. S. May Build Machine To Cut Linters

House Bill Would Enable Farm Department To Build Unit.

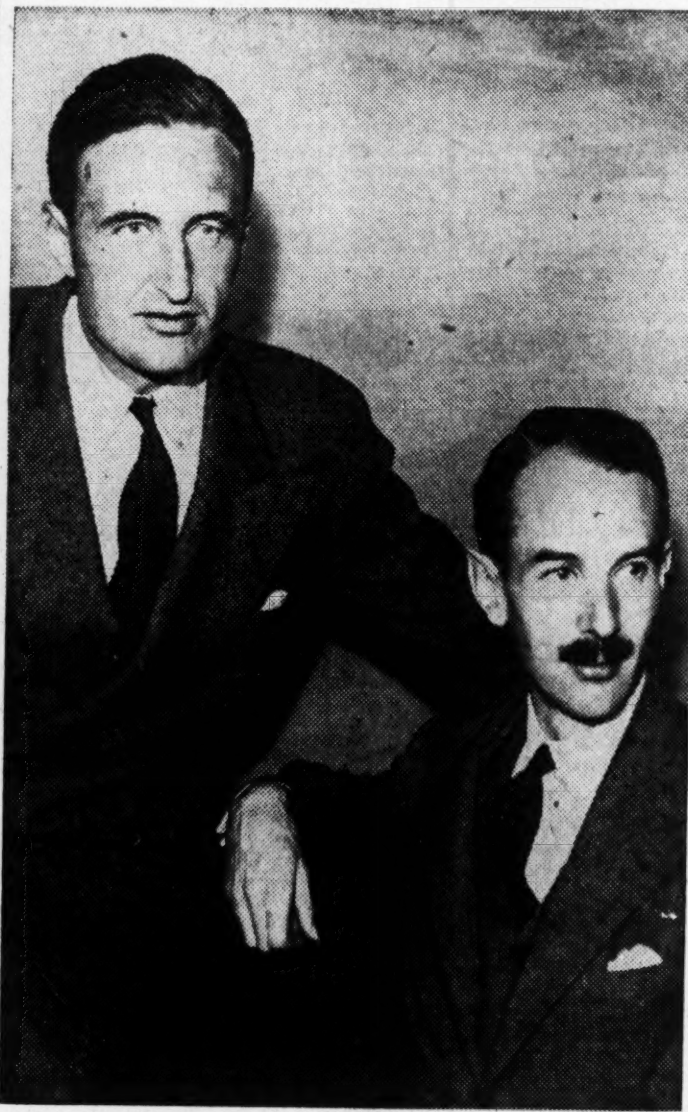

WASHINGTON, Oct. 8.—(AP)—An experimental machine for rapid cutting of cotton linters would be built by the Department of Agriculture under a $30,000 item included in the supplemental defense appropriation bill introduced today.

Carl F. Speh, acting chief of the Bureau of Agricultural Chemistry and Engineering, told the House Appropriations Committee during hearings on the bill that the machine would help use the large surplus of lint cotton.

The cotton has to be cut to a length of one-tenth of an inch so it can be treated chemically in the making of purified cellulose.

"There are various commercial cutters on the market which have been used from time to time for the purpose," Speh said, "but they have been very inefficient and very unsatisfactory as far as maintenance cost was concerned."

The machine desired would cut 28 to 30 bales of cotton lint an hour.

Life in Britain Too 'Dull' for Eager People

2d Front, Early Victory Public Hope, Consul Says Here.

By FRANK DRAKE.

Ho hum... life in the British Isles is very, very dull these days, despite the war and air raids and bombs and what not, and this social note is exceedingly encouraging, confides Malcom S. Henderson, new British consul to Georgia, Florida and South Carolina, who arrived here yesterday to set up consulate headquarters in Atlanta.

The dullness of life and the discomfort resulting from the war make the Britisher mighty unhappy about the whole thing and all the more anxious to win the war and get it over with, said Consul Henderson. Unpleasant conditions make the average Britisher more aggressively minded and he howls for a second front, action and victory.

All of which is good, the consul said.

Leaving Jacksonville.

Henderson, who was accompanied here by James Marjoribanks, former British consul over a department in the British general consulate in New York, recently returned from a trip to England and Scotland, where for two months he observed the British under war conditions.

Henderson is seeking office space for the consulate, which is being moved here from Jacksonville because Atlanta is more centrally located and because it will enable the consul to handle English affairs in his three states more rapidly.

He said practically all males in the Isles between the ages of 16 and 70 are in uniform and so are a great many of the women. Everyone has to work long, hard hours, and at the end of such a day, each has civilian defense duties to perform.

Little Social Activity.

Thus, there is little or no time for social activities, and "besides," says Henderson, "if you go any place, there is nothing there to eat or drink." So, why go?

Whisky is virtually impossible to obtain and "the beer is water," the consul asserted.

All men in England are in the home guard, preparing to kill enemy paratroopers and to fight to the last ditch in case of invasion, and Henderson said he was most interested in observing a practice maneuver of battle staged in Edinburgh between the staff of a morning newspaper there and the employees of a department store across the street.

Up and down the alleys ran the "clarks" of the store and the reporters of the paper, waving their guns and shouting through their Scotch burrs.

"Drorop, I kilt ye with my rrrrrifle," shouted one "clark." "Ye arree deed."

"Oh, no," growled back a reporter.

Historic Confederate Arsenal To Supply Arms for '42 Yanks

SELMA, Ala., Oct. 8.—(AP)—Old-timers of Selma know their Civil War history—and their knowledge is due to pay off high dividends in the current scrap salvage campaign.

When Sherman started his "march to the sea" in 1864, he sent General James Harrison Wilson on a marauding expedition into Alabama to destroy stores and harry a force commanded by the Confederate's crack cavalry leader, General Nathan Bedford Forrest.

In the spring of 1865, Wilson's Army neared Selma, the arsenal of the Confederacy. Forrest made a stand before the city, but was forced back and the Blue soldiers marched in and burned a large part of it.

But, on April 1, 1865, before the city fell, the Confederates rounded up all heavy ordnance, shipyard and other equipment, and dumped it from a high bluff into the Alabama river. The location was marked on maps, which, now tattered and yellowed with age, still show the site clearly enough to direct the search.

Today, 77 years after that Confederate tragedy, Selma residents are embarking on one of the most ambitious reclamation projects yet noted in the salvage drive.

Headed by O. M. Jackson, chairman of the school salvage committee, and Morris Bloch, Dallas county chairman, they appealed directly to Donald Nelson, chairman of the War Production Board, for aid in the project. Nelson gave his approval.

Conferences already have been held with J. A. Rumpley, of Tuscaloosa, area engineer, and Captain H. A. Gould, of Selma, associate superintendent of the Alabama River Service, and next week the government snag boat McCalla is scheduled to arrive here with a dredge to get operations under way.

Selmans expect thousands and thousands of pounds of scrap will be brought up—they know the cache is there, for high school boys only five years ago dug up a 700-pound cannon as part of a history project.

They'll certainly smile again if you use Constitution Want Ads.

Speed-Up Stops Will Save Over 250 Bus Tires a Year

Atlantans are helping to keep Uncle Sam's tanks and armored cars rolling! By walking a few steps farther to their bus and trackless trolley stops, they are making more tires available for trucks and jeeps and airplane landing wheels.

The Speed-Up plan, by eliminating the less frequently used car and bus stops, will enable us to get better than 11 per cent more mileage out of a set of tires.

With the additional mileage which we will gain from Speed-Up stops, we will be able to effect a saving of 21 tires a month, or 252 tires a year.

The saving of 252 big bus tires is equal to a saving of 1,632 passenger car tires.

In addition, the saving of gasoline in the operation of motor buses alone will amount to more than 5,000 gallons a month, or more than 60,000 gallons a year, as a result of Speed-Up stops.

We Have No "Right" To New Bus Tires

In getting new tires, the Georgia Power Company is treated just like any other citizen. We have to go to the ration board and apply for them, the same as anybody else. We have to show that they are needed for a purpose essential to the welfare of the community. The rationing officials are just as hard-boiled with us as they are with other people. Incidentally, about 80 per cent of the "new" tires which the board allows us are "recaps."

The Office of Defense Transportation has stated that stops should not be less than 660 feet apart. Before Speed-Up stops were adopted, many of our stops were closer together than 660 feet, and the average for all trolley and bus stops was 572 feet.

The rationing board informed us very plainly that we could not expect favorable consideration of our requests for new tires until we conformed to the ODT recommendation.

Our Duty to Save Scarce Materials

Obviously the saving of precious rubber is a patriotic obligation on all citizens—as well as a necessity imposed by rationing. No less important is the duty to save steel, copper, and other critical metals.

The excessive starting and stopping of street cars, trackless trolleys and buses subjects gasoline and electric motors to undue wear and tear. It uses up brake shoes and brake linings. It grinds down street car wheels and tracks.

Our riders realize that they have an obligation to help save these critical materials and they are willingly co-operating in the Speed-Up stop program.

House Passes Six-Billion-Dollar Appropriation Bill

WASHINGTON, Oct. 8.—(AP)—A $6,236,956,621 appropriation measure, boosting this nation's cost-of-war bill to $220,000,000,000, was passed swiftly by the house today to finance a naval aviation expansion program and a variety of other war-born projects.

Federal Jury Indicts Atlanta Firm, Official

Fulton Bag Faces Anti-Trust Charges in Colorado.

The Fulton Bag and Cotton Mills, of Atlanta, and E. A. Cronheim, company secretary and treasurer, were named in a federal grand jury indictment yesterday at Denver, Colo., on charges of violating federal anti-trust statutes, the Associated Press said last night.

Cronheim and the Fulton company were indicted with four other firms and nine executives of the country with conspiring to fix and control "arbitrary and non-competitive prices in violation of federal laws."

James M. Henderson, special assistant to the attorney general, said the five firms produce about 55 million open mesh bags a year, which is almost 75 per cent of the nation's total. Such bags, commonly called burlap or gunny sacks, are used in packing and shipping fruit, vegetables and nuts.

Contacted at his home here, Cronheim said: "This is news to me. I'd rather not make a statement until I find out what it is all about."

Named with the Atlanta firm were the Bemis Brothers Bag Company, of St. Louis; Chase Bag Company, New York; Grand Rapids Fiber Cord Company, Grand Rapids, Mich.; and Frank W. Wynne & Son, Inc., Philadelphia. Eight officials of these four companies also were named.

Henderson, chief of the justice department's anti-trust division mountain region office, said the conspiracy charged was nationwide and had been under observation for months by the Federal Bureau of Investigation and the anti-trust division.

The accused companies, Henderson said, divided the United States into geographical sales zones and sold bags at identical prices in each of the zones, limited the number and location of dealers in each territory and the stocks of bags to be kept in each zone.

The indictment also charges that the firms refused to appoint as dealers those who refused to adhere to prices fixed, and eliminated dealers who sold at prices below the fixed rates.

It charges also that the companies maintained checks on prices, harassed those who tried to sell at lower prices, "boycotted persons who sold open mesh bags at prices below those fixed by the conspirators, and utilized patent agreements to control the price of open mesh bags."

2,000 Dogs Will Train

On Widener Estate

WASHINGTON, Oct. 8.—(AP)—The big Widener estate near Philadelphia has been turned over to the Coast Guard for the training of some of the 2,000 dogs for shore patrol duty.

The House Appropriations Subcommittee disclosed today in releasing testimony by Vice Admiral R. R. Waesche, commandant of the Coast Guard, who said Joseph E. Widener, Philadelphia financier and philanthropist, had "kindly loaned to us" his estate for dog training.

Admiral Waesche said only German shepherds were being trained on the Widener estate, although the Coast Guard uses a half-dozen other breeds as well.

ENTERS ARMY.

ATHENS, Ga., Oct. 8.—Dr. John Olin Eidson, assistant professor of English at the University of Georgia, reported to Camp Robinson, Arkansas, October 5 as a first lieutenant in the infantry.

The new appropriations encountered no opposition on the floor, winning final approval by a voice vote. Members of the house appropriations committee informed the house that the United States soon would be spending at the rate of $6,000,000,000 monthly for arms. Nearly 90 per cent of the new omnibus deficiency bill was earmarked for the Navy, with $2,862,000,000—the measure's largest single allocation—set apart for 14,611 naval planes to give Uncle Sam's growing fleet of aircraft carriers its sting.

In addition to the direct appropriations to a dozen different government agencies, the measure formally granted the Navy Department authority to enter into contract obligations for previously authorized, 1,900,000-ton fleet expansion estimated to cost $9,510,000,000.

On top of $5,595,388,308 for the Navy, the measure bundled up $500,000,000 for war housing, $33,800,000 for the Office of War Information, $19,000,000 for a Guayule rubber project, $25,000,000 for the Office of Defense Transportation, and $10,303,680 for the War Manpower Commission.

Both Chairman Cannon, Democrat, Missouri, of the Appropriations Committee, and Representative Taber, Republican, New York, ranking minority member agreed that the country's spending rate for war—$5,384,000,000 in September—would reach $6,000,000 a month by the first of the year.

While Taber expressed the hope that it would go "still higher," Cannon, in response to a question from the floor, said that he believed the $6,000,000,000 monthly rate was approaching the maximum.

Quick Senate Action.

The measure now goes to the senate, where quick action is also expected.

During the house discussion, Representative Cannon, Democrat, Missouri, declared that American-built planes were superior to those of the enemy. He said that General George C. Marshall, Army chief of staff, had sent a United States pilot "on a special mission" to the Solomon Islands and New Guinea for the express purpose of determining the relative merits of the Japanese Zero.

The pilot reported back, Cannon said, that he had been unable to find a single American flyer who would "trade" his American ship for a Zero in battle.

In sending the bill to the floor, the appropriations committee made public a transcript of testimony—carefully edited to prevent military secrets from reaching enemy ears—in which top-ranking government officials discussed new problems arising from the war.

Manpower Talk. High on the priority list of congressional discussion, the possibility that legislation will be sought soon to control the nation's manpower and meet the needs of industry, agriculture and the armed forces was laid before the committee by top-ranking war officials.

Paul V. McNutt, head of the War Manpower Commission, told the committee that "some kind of national service legislation is imperative," adding however, that it may never be necessary to "use compulsion."

From War Production Chief Donald Nelson came the opinion that "appropriate legislation is going to have to be passed in the nature of a national selective service so that men can be directed into spots where they are needed."

The transcript disclosed that the same problem was worrying the Office of War Information. Elmer Davis, OWI chief, said that the nation is becoming as confused over the manpower issue as it was over the rubber situation three months ago, and that clarification of the War Manpower Commission's policy was necessary to remove "confusion from the public mind."

No Forcible Conscription. Davis, in discussing the OWI's part in the war program, praised the nation's newspapers for their

MacARTHUR DECORATES NEWSMAN—Vern Haugland, Associated Press correspondent who reached safety after 43 days in the New Guinea jungles after bailing out of an Army plane, is shown receiving the U. S. Army's Silver Star award from General Douglas MacArthur in a New Guinea hospital. MacArthur cited the newsman for "devotion and fortitude with which you have done your duty."

"wholehearted co-operation" in the work, and expressed belief that it would be "impossible as well as undesirable to attempt forcible censorship."

"It is the job of OWI," Davis declared, "not only to tell the American people how the war is going, but where it is going and where it came from—its nature and origins, how our government is conducting it, and what, besides national survival, our government hopes to get out of victory."

He cautioned that Hitler had used propaganda to "soften up" France before its downfall, that the Nazi leader "is using that same weapon on us, too; he has been using it for years past; and we would be fools not to use it on him and his allies as well."

He drew a distinction, however, between propaganda based on truth and falsehood, saying the OWI would stick to the truth.

Transcript Highlights.

Other highlights from the transcript: 1. Disclosure that the War Communications Board has approved, "in principle," a broad plan for government development and control of all the nation's shortwave facilities as part of the OWI's strategy to reach audiences in enemy territory.

2. A statement by James L. Fly, Federal Communications Commission chairman, that the FCC is investigating reports that radio announcers have been tipping off enemy submarines through tricky song dedications and the juggling of prices in advertising.

3. Testimony by Army engineers that construction of the Florida cross-state barge canal is not likely to be started until the war is over because of the demand on material, equipment and manpower.

4. A report by Undersecretary of the Navy James V. Forrestal that the Navy is putting "every possible effort we can upon aircraft carriers," and his statement that contract negotiations with the Navy Department already had begun.

5. Assurance by Rear Admiral J. H. Towers, until recently chief of the Navy Bureau of Aeronautics, that the Navy now "has considerably more pilots than required for our general needs."

WPA Workers Help Pick Whitfield Cotton Special to THE CONSTITUTION. DALTON, Ga., Oct. 8.—Whitfield county WPA workers are picking cotton this week. In order to assist the farmers in getting out their cotton, the regular projects of the WPA have been closed down this week, it was announced. More than 30 men from the WPA loaded onto trucks and were driven to surrounding farms to help save the big cotton crop now white in the fields.

If the weather permits, these workers will assist in cotton picking all week. Keeley Greer, Whitfield county agent, states that the cotton is opening so fast that it will be necessary to get it out right away in order for it to be marketable. He believes that with the aid of the WPA workers the cotton crops of this county will be saved.

Local industrial firms have also furnished help in this cotton picking campaign.

Embezzlement Trial of Rivers Set Next Month

Former Governor Accused of Defrauding State of $66,000.

Former Governor Rivers will be placed on trial in Fulton superior court November 2 on charges of embezzlement and conspiracy to defraud the state, Solicitor General Boykin announced yesterday.

Rivers, with a score of other former state officials and associates, was indicted last February. There are two embezzlement indictments against the former Governor and several charging conspiracy. The principal embezzlement indictment alleges misappropriation of approximately $66,000. The other indictments grew out of purchases of asphalt and road-building machinery by the state while Rivers was Governor.

Boykin also scheduled the trial of Dr. Hiram W. Evans, charged with conspiracy, for October 21. The first effort to convict Evans early in the year resulted in a mistrial.

Evans is due to go on trial on a charge of using the mails to defraud, in federal court on October 14, and it is doubtful, it was said yesterday, if that case can be completed by October 21.

Two of the defendants in the state cases, Fred Scott and W. W. Willis, entered demands for trials during this term. Unless they withdraw these demands, they must be tried. Otherwise, they will go free by default.

Nazi Searchlights Probe Channel Sky

LONDON, Oct. 8.—(AP)—The Germans switched on their powerful searchlights on the occupied French coast south of Calais tonight and probed the skies and the English channel.

The reason was not immediately apparent, since there had been no report of air raids or sea engagements. The Germans, however, have been jittery along the coast since the Allied raid on Dieppe.

The lights appeared to be installed on high ground at a point where the channel is but 20 miles wide.

Willkie To Visit Chinese Front After Stopover in Chungking

CHUNGKING, Oct. 8.—(AP)—Wendell Willkie left Chungking yesterday and tonight he was believed to be inspecting some sections of the sprawling Chinese battlefields, the oldest by far of this World War.

His destination was not disclosed, but earlier in the week Chinese officials had announced that all facilities had been placed at his disposal for visits to the front. When Willkie reached China, it was announced that he would remain two weeks. He had been in Chungking five days when his plane took off.

Every newspaper prominently displayed the statement, by Willkie, calling for a determined Allied offensive everywhere.

"Willkie's statement bounds and rebounds with sincerity and wisdom; it is the greatest statement he has made during his present trip," the newspaper Ta Kung Pao said. The New People's Daily declared "A savior of post war humanity has descended upon us." Willkie's statement also called for an end to the empire of nations over nations, an implied appeal for the cessation of extra-territorial rights of nations in China.

DAVISON'S MEN'S SHOPS

Dudley Glass

Critical visitor out at our house observed the fish pool in the back yard and remarked, nastily, that it was the first fishless fish pool he had seen in his journeys around the world.

"I don't count those darting top minnows," he said. "The ponds are full of them. I mean goldfish in their myriad varieties."

"Those are not top minnows," I remonstrated. "They are gambusia, or gombosia, as you prefer, or gunbosia. They earn their living eating the larva or larvae of mosquitoes."

"As for goldfish, if you are insistent, I'll tell you the tragic story, though it brings tears to my eyes."

"It involves cats. Neighbors' cats. I'll admit the evidence is wholly circumstantial but many a man has been hanged on less."

"I'm afraid I couldn't make a case that would stand in court. In murder cases the state must produce the corpus delicti, or the dead victim. What jury would hang a man for murder with the chance the corpse would turn up alive and healthy a week afterward? It would be most embarrassing."

"We had goldfish or goldfishes, by the dozen. Little ones, big ones, fan tails, comets, many varieties. Every year they'd disappear, one by one. And every spring I'd invest five bucks in a new school, or swarm or colony. I'd feed them approved food and change the water frequently and they'd thrive."

"But every morning there'd be one or two fewer. And never a dead fish floating upside down on the surface. No corpus delicti. But you can't tell me a goldfish climbs out of a pool and wanders down to the lake. The answer is cats. Neighbors' cats. Because we discovered years ago that goldfish and cats are allergic, each to the other. So we keep no cats."

Excellent Pets

"We miss our goldfish. When one learns to know them by pet names and rejoice at their welcome at feeding time and watch them wag their long and transparent tails when fed a few grains of oatmeal a mutual affection

Fishless Fish Pool Draws Scorn of An Uncouth Guest

It is not demonstrative, on the part of the fish. A goldfish is conservative. He does not climb into your lap.

"He doesn't lick your chin with a long, prehensile and exceedingly moist tongue. He doesn't clamor to be let in and out of the back door. But, on the other hand, he lives on less oatmeal than a Chinese exists on rice. He has no fleas and I have never known one to chew the corner off a new rug. They make very nice pets."

"Why?" objected our guest, a most disagreeable chap when something he ate last night disagreed with him. "What can they do. Do they know any tricks?"

"Tricks," I returned eagerly. "You should have known old Socrates, an eight-inch fantail, not counting the tail. If I told you what dear old Socrates would do you wouldn't believe me."

"I certainly wouldn't," said this peevish visitor. "It looks like rain. Will you drive me up to the bus line?"

"I certainly will," quoth I. "Why didn't you mention it sooner?"

Much Talk, No Cash

Somewhat belated information about Georgia's recent primary:

Friend who drives me into town occasionally told me, before primary day, that he had virtually no business left, on account of inability to buy anything to sell. So he decided to speculate.

The stock market was unfamiliar to him, but he thought he knew politics—as if anybody does.

"I had $5,000 to risk," he said. "On Arnall. I was willing to give reasonable odds. The Talmadge people were talking big and mighty confident."

"This conversation was just a day or two ago."

"So I called up a series of big Talmadge leaders and offered bets. Several of them were regarded as heavy plungers. One of them was known as a sportsman who would bet you on anything—the weather, a horse race or the score of a football game two months ahead."

"Do you know how much I finally got down on Arnall? Money placed? Well, it was $65 bucks. I won it, but it was hardly worth the trouble."

Representing Belgium

Caller in the office was Henry L. DeGive, who operated Atlanta theaters when the road shows kept them filled for 40 weeks every year. He was what show people call a showman, the highest compliment in the vocabulary.

built the Grand, one of the south's finest, and its twin Grand in Macon.

But what started this was Mr. DeGive's interest in Belgium. His father, an intimate friend of the King Leopold of that day, was appointed consul for Belgium in Atlanta.

After his death, many years ago, the office passed to Henry. They have been the only ones. Henry still is consul for Belgium—not German occupied Belgium but the loyal government set up in England after Hitler overrode the staunch little country.

I imagine his duties do not keep him working overtime.

Mayor Approves Bills From Monday's Council

Mayor Hartsfield yesterday approved all measures sent to him from Monday's meetings of city council and the aldermanic board.

One ordinance provided that city hall shall open at 8:30 a. m. and close at 5 p. m. each week day except Saturday, when the closing time shall be 12:30 p. m.

A previous ordinance would have advanced the closing hour to 5:30 p. m. and would have interfered with the smooth operation of the staggered hour program.

No Lamps Out Of His Shells, Says Marietta

Those Three Items Are Bound for the Scrap Heap.

R. D. Matthews, of Route 3, Marietta, isn't thinking about turning in his 75-mm. shells for scrap and then seeing them used for a lamp. No sirree.

So he brought the last of three shells to The Constitution to be placed in the Newspapers' scrap drive heap.

Matthews wasn't taking any chances and here's why:

He turned in two shells for the scrap heap. Next thing he knew, a woman telephoned.

"If I put in an equivalent amount of scrap," Matthews said she asked, "will it be all right to take the shells for lamps?"

"No," he replied, adding "Just put your scrap on the heap and leave the shells alone."

Arnall To Address Lions Club Today

Ellis Arnall, governor-elect, will address members of the Atlanta Lions Club at 12:15 o'clock this afternoon at the Ansley hotel.

Representatives of the press, city, state and county officials, businessmen, officers and members of other civic groups have been invited to hear Arnall speak.

Tax Assessor for City Suffers Sprained Arm

J. Sid Tiller, city tax assessor, yesterday was a casualty, having obtained his wounds in execution of city business.

His right arm was badly sprained when he slipped on wet leaves while inspecting for taxing purposes a piece of property on Fort street. Doctors said the arm was not broken—just sprained badly.

He was accompanied on the inspection tour by Assessors Joe Little and Leo Suddeth.

Good Morning

By LOUIE D. NEWTON.

A WORLD LEADER.

Atlanta gratefully and joyfully welcomes General and Mrs. George L. Carpenter today. They will be in Atlanta until next Wednesday.

Commissioner William C. Arnold, territorial commander of the Salvation Army in the 15 southern states and the District of Columbia, has planned a busy schedule for the General and Mrs. Carpenter during their stay in Atlanta.

There will be a reception and dinner this evening. Mrs. Carpenter will address a meeting for women Saturday afternoon at 3:30 o'clock at the Druid Hills Baptist church.

General and Mrs. Carpenter will address a mass meeting Sunday afternoon at the municipal auditorium at 3 o'clock. There will be numerous conferences with territorial staff groups on Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday.

The south is honored to have this great world leader of the Salvation Army for these days of counsel and inspiration. General Carpenter became a Salvation Army officer 50 years ago in Australia, serving in that land until 1910, when he went to London for seven years in the international headquarters. He returned to Australia for six years as editor of the War Cry and for administrative work.

General Carpenter was territorial commander of the Salvation Army in the republics of Paraguay, Uruguay and the Argentine for some years. He then became territorial commander for the Dominion of Canada, including the Army's activities in Alaska, Bermuda and Newfoundland. In 1939 he was elected to the generalship of the Salvation Army for the world. Mrs. Carpenter is a distinguished author and a lifelong Salvationist.

Commenting on the visit of the General and Mrs. Carpenter, Commissioner Arnold said: "Our international leader has faced the loss of dozens of centers in England, France, Belgium, Holland, Burma, the Dutch East Indies, and the Malay peninsula, including the destruction of our international headquarters building in London. He has also been faced with the necessity of organizing rapidly expanding war services in all parts of the world, at the same time maintaining essential services on the home fronts. He faced the staggering loss of much equipment in the evacuation of Dunkirk."

For more than a half century the Salvation Army has borne its ever-expanding testimony around the world, holding faithfully to the original conviction of General Booth that the first great need of every mortal soul is the redeeming grace of the Lord Jesus Christ. The visit of General and Mrs. Carpenter will serve, I fully believe, to quicken in all our hearts the purpose to serve our blessed Lord and Saviour in these days of stress and strain, seeking anew to tell the story of his glorious salvation to all mankind."

CANNON CRACKERS

AS HOME FIRE ALARM

Editor, Constitution: I have read a great deal about fire prevention this week, and think it is fine, but I have a suggestion to make that is so simple, you may think it silly.

For the average home buy about one dozen cannon crackers. Place one or two over the furnace, with the fuse exposed, one in each room and several in the attic.

When the first blaze comes forth from your furnace, your kitchen stove, or that defective wiring in the attic, you will not be long in getting out of that good warm bed of yours to call the fire department before the blaze spreads further.

The Crackers are absolutely harmless, and will never disturb you except in case of dire necessity. This method could also be applied to all business houses and warehouses. These should be very large crackers, and if the place was closed over night, some passer-by would be most certain to take notice of the explosion, peradventure our faithful cop should be taking a little snooze.

I have until recently had a horror of either waking or not waking as the case might be, with the house on fire, but not any more, as I have used this method for years.

I honestly believe that if you will publish these suggestions in The Constitution, it will save the lives of many, and millions of property damage. Defective wires in your attic are like a thief in the night, but these cannon crackers are better than any man's watchdog—for they never sleep.

"We have grown so accustomed to the idea that we could command the resources of the world that a very few people realize how adversely the position has changed since 1939, and especially since the entry of Japan into the war," the British ambassador said in an address prepared for delivery at Founder's Day exercises at Carnegie Institute. He added:

"In 1939, the Axis powers had no rubber, apart from their accumulated stocks and the synthetic product; today they have 91 per cent of the world's supply. They had 25 per cent of the world's oil; they now have 66 per cent.

"They had seven per cent of the world's iron or ore; they now have 44 per cent. They had nine per cent of the tin ore; they now have 73 per cent. They had 10 per cent of manganese ore; they now have 35 per cent. They had eight per cent of the lead ore; they now have 21 per cent. They had six per cent of the world's flax; they now have 36 per cent.

"These are bad figures. To some extent they are offset by our control of most of the materials which the enemy has not got, and by the lead we still retain in such commodities as nickel.

"But these figures are a warning to reconsider our rooted conviction that time is necessarily on our side. It may be on our side, if we face these ugly facts and apply ourselves more seriously than we have done to organize our own sources of supply. It will certainly not be on our side if we think we can settle down to a nice, long, comfortable war, with a sure victory four or five years ahead. If

Reviews Experience.

Reviewing British experience in designing and producing war materials, Lord Halifax said the British had held their own against the Axis in aircraft design, but "the story of the tank has not been so satisfactory." He added, however, that the British had "no reason to feel despondent" about the quality of new tanks now coming out of the factories.

"He warned that the Germans, confronted with increasing power of the United Nations, would 'spare no effort of propaganda of false suggestion and of lying rumor that might destroy the confidence of the United Nations in one another.'"

"I have not the smallest doubt that most of the criticism you hear in this country of Britain, and any criticism there may be in Britain of the United States, is inspired, directly or indirectly, by our enemies," he said.

An empty house is more expensive than a Want Ad in The Constitution that will rent it.

A. P. Calhoun's Funeral Rites Set for Today

Great-Grandson of Former Vice President Died Wednesday.

Funeral services will be held at 11 o'clock this morning in Peachtree Chapel for Andrew Pickens Calhoun, a great-grandson of Vice President John C. Calhoun and Druff Green, founder of the city of Dalton. He died Wednesday in a private hospital.

Dean Raimundo de Ovies will officiate at the rites here. Burial will be in the Calhoun plot at Clemson College in South Carolina.

For the last 25 years, Calhoun lived at 482 Moreland avenue, N. E. Thousands of persons visited his home to see the furniture given by John C. Calhoun by the people of South Carolina while he was vice president during the Andrew Jackson administration.

Part of the John C. Calhoun furniture is at Clemson College in memory of Andrew Calhoun's wife, Florida Lee Calhoun, who wrote the words for the song "The Hills of Home." His wife was the only great-niece of Mrs. Thomas G. Clemson, daughter of the former vice president.

Born in Red River county, Texas, Andrew Calhoun was the son of Druff Green and Elizabeth Beasley Calhoun. He was engaged in the insurance and oil business in Texas for many years before moving to Atlanta.

6 Million Pounds of Scrap Collected at Fort Benning

FORT BENNING, Ga., Oct. 8.—(AP)—More than six million pounds of scrap metal have been collected from the barracks, the training grounds and the dumps of Fort Benning and five million pounds of this salvaged metal already is on its way to the foundries of the nation's steel mills.

Brigadier General Walter Scott Fulton, commanding general of Fort Benning, announced today that in the period from April 1 to September 30, 1942, a total of 6,263,844 pounds of metal was salvaged. A total of 5,125,544 pounds already has been sold and shipped to dealers and 1,138,300 pounds of valuable iron, steel, aluminum, brass, copper and other metals has been collected at the storage yards and advertised for bids.

In addition to the 3,131 tons of metal collected this summer, another 400,000 pounds was salvaged, recovered and returned to use at Fort Benning making a grand total of 6,663,844 pounds of metal reclaimed at the post.

Fort Benning figures on the salvage of scrap rubber since August 1 also are impressive. Major J. R. Johnson, post inspector, reported to General Fulton that a total of 164,416 pounds or 82 tons of rubber had been collected, including 159,076 pounds of rubber tires and 5,340 pounds of miscellaneous scrap rubber.

Acres of training grounds at the infantry school; 20-year-old dumps on the outskirts of the post; office buildings, hangars, barracks were scoured by wrecking crews during the summer in order to bring in the six million pounds of salvaged metal.

Much of the iron and steel came from an old dump that became so productive soldiers termed it the "Fort Benning iron mine." Nearly 125 tons have already been taken from the "mine" in the shape of old wall lockers, railroad rail, discarded steel coils, and all of the other metal used around a permanent Army post.

Workers salvaged everything from huge 35-ton World War tanks to "brass tacks." More than 76,000 pounds of metal was salvaged in one World War British tank that was a landmark on the post proper for years. In contrast to this tonnage, 800 pounds of shaving cream and tooth paste tubes and 175 pounds of pocket knives were added to the scrap heap.

Jury Clears Farmer On Tax Evasion Count

H. C. Williams, farmer and peanut processor, of Ashburn, yesterday was found innocent by a federal jury here on charges of income tax evasion.

The government had charged that Williams failed to file tax returns on an income of $52,634.73 for the fiscal year ending July 31, 1935, and that he owed the government $9,597.77 in taxes for that year.

WAAC Officers To Get Salutes Of Enlisted Men; It's Orders

If some of you enlisted men have been wondering just what military courtesy should be shown Women's Army Auxiliary Corps members, here's the answer—

WAAC officers, of which there are now several in Atlanta, get the same courtesy from an enlisted man as any other officer of the Army, Captain William E. Reynolds, adjutant at Fort McPherson, states. That means:

1. Soldiers must salute WAAC officers, just as the lady officers must salute regular Army officers of higher rank than themselves.

2. Commissioned officers of the WAAC technically should be called "Third Officer" or "Second Officer," etc., but it is also good etiquette—and easier—to call them "Lieutenant."

3. Instead of "Sir," the enlisted man must say "Madam" or "Ma'am" to the officer WAAC.

Vital Need For Women Workers Cited

4,000,000 Must Volunteer for War Jobs Within Year, Corson Says.

Women, 4,000,000 of them, must voluntarily go into war industry within the year, or this nation must adopt legislation drafting labor, John J. Corson, national director of the United States Employment Service, said here yesterday. He is conducting the second of six regional meetings of field employment service managers.

"In the next six months," Corson declared, "between three and five million additional workers will be needed for ship yards, aircraft factories and ordinance works. The Army will take 2,000,000 more people. That means that women must fill the places of the men who go to fight."

Declaring that to date the response of women has been very slow to an appeal now being conducted in centers of war industry, the former newspaperman said that public opinion now demands the passage of some sort of national service act which would give the government control over manpower as well as the armed forces.

Recounting Problems. In recounting the problems which face the employment service in defense centers, Corson pointed out that there is little co-operation from draft boards in this region in determining whether men inducted into the Army from war industry can be replaced from the available labor market.

Lack of housing facilities in many communities has added to the complexity of the situation, and is responsible for an amazing rate of labor turnover, particularly in shipyards.

Reports from Baltimore made in yesterday's meeting told of a firm which had hired 1,000 people in the last 60 days, while increasing its pay roll only 100. This, of course, was an extreme case, but for the area it was estimated that at least four times the necessary number of employees must be hired to meet anticipated increases in personnel.

Labor Market. Corson predicted that within the next six months, this country will have to adopt a plan similar to that which went into effect in Canada on September 1, under which the government employment service controls the labor market. Included in the Canadian plan are the following rules: 1. No worker may quit his job without seven days' prior notice in writing. 2. No employer may lay off a worker without seven days' prior notice in writing to the employment service. 3. Employers may interview applicants for employment only with the jobseekers have a permit from the employment service. 4. Any worker unemployed more than seven days may be ordered to work in any industry considered appropriate by the employment service.

Canada had frozen farm labor a year before the new regulations went into effect.

Elaborating on the subject of women in the labor field, Corson said that industry must make a comprehensive survey of its production methods in order to make adjustments necessary for the employment of a large number of women.

General Reluctance. A general reluctance on the part of employers to hire women for other than clerical positions is noticeable throughout the country, Corson pointed out. In private shipyards, for instance, almost no women are employed, despite the many so-called radical production experiments being carried on. But in government shipyards, the proportion of women doing welding, caulking and other of the so-called heavy jobs, is pretty high.

The overall picture at the present time is about 16 per cent of women in the labor field. During the last war the figure rose to about 25 per cent, and before this war is over, it must go to at least 40 per cent, he said.

Corson is a native of Philadelphia, and an alumnus of the University of Virginia, from which institution he holds a Ph. D. degree in economics. He formerly worked on a Richmond (Va.) newspaper and served as assistant director of NYA in the early days of that agency.

South Is Most War-Minded, Jack Tate Says

General Counsel of FSA Visits City on Tour of Inspection.

The south is more war-minded than any other part of the nation, Jack B. Tate, general counsel of the Federal Security Agencies, now on a tour of inspection, declared here yesterday.

Working with the government agencies which have to do with employment, vocational training, public health and other related fields, Tate said that the south is going all out in sending manpower into war industry.

Discussing the old-age insurance program of the Social Security Board, Tate predicted that legislation will be passed to enable men who leave private employment for military service to remain on a par with those who build up their old-age insurance reserve while working in war industry.

He expects, also, a wide extension of such groups as agricultural workers, small private business and domestic servants, as a cushion against post-war depression.

6,000 in Coal Strike Ordered Back to Mines

Lewis Tells UMW Anthracite Walkout Is Unwarranted.

CINCINNATI, Oct. 8.—(AP)—The United Mine Workers of America, heading a plea of President John L. Lewis, refused late today to extend autonomy to all UMW districts.

Lewis in a 60-minute speech declared that no district should have independence until it first demonstrated capability of administering its affairs in a business-like manner.

Until such time, he added, the international executive board should continue to appoint the district officers. Some districts now elect their own officers.

Twenty-three delegates, most of them from districts 17 and 21 in West Virginia, pleaded for autonomy in a five-hour debate which became so heated that a physical encounter between two members was only narrowly averted. Twenty-two delegates opposed contentions that autonomy was more democratic.

Earlier, the 37th annual convention instructed 6,000 anthracite miners in Pennsylvania to end strikes which Lewis declared were "totally unwarranted."

law has been on Georgia statute books for many years, but seldom has been used.

"My action," said the judge, "was to protect farmers in Georgia from further suffering in an already-serious labor shortage."

"Mr. Freedman's personnel manager should know a few of the laws about personnel problems," said Georgia Commissioner of Labor Ben T. Huie yesterday.

The personnel agent, Mr. Weston, in coming to Georgia and trying to lure labor away to work for a private corporation has violated a law that is not peculiar to Georgia. It exists in every state of the union.

"If Mr. Freedman really wants labor for a bona-fide war project, all he has to do is to appeal to the United States Employment Service in the capital city of his home state of New Jersey, and that capital city happens to be at Trenton.

Although no steps have been taken yet to slow down the growth of the Army and Navy, he said in response to questions at a press conference that there is an "outside limit" on their size.

Of immediate importance, he said, is "the time element." He indicated that he meant by this that agreement must be reached on the speed with which the armed forces should be built up, so that they might not outrun the ability of the country's war plants to supply them with weapons and equipment.

"However, once the army has been built up and armed, it will be a comparatively simple matter to keep it furnished with an adequate flow of replacement supplies and equipment," he added.

"There is constant discussion between the chiefs of staff, the manpower organization, and the army and navy, as to the time schedule under which the growing army can be equipped," Nelson said. "The time is coming rapidly when the whole matter must be decided. I think the decision will be soon."

"Until we reach this limit, it is a question of constant adjustment. Women are coming into war industry and other new sources of manpower are being tapped but sometime we will reach the bottom of the barrel."

Asked whether he and the military leaders agreed on how soon the bottom of the barrel would be reached, Nelson replied: "I'm sure there will be a meeting of the minds on the outside limit, and then we'll try to reach it."

Asked specifically whether the nation's arms producers could equip and supply 10,000,000 men in the army by the end of 1943, Nelson replied with a smile, "I'd rather not discuss that."

Nelson indicated he approved the idea of a national service act to mobilize all manpower for distribution among the armed services, the farms and industrial plants, and to relieve the shortage of voluntary machinery doesn't work."

Meanwhile maldistribution of manpower already was beginning to hamper war production. Output of both copper and molybdenum, which Nelson termed "two very, very vital things," has been retarded by the defection of workers from mines and smelters, he said. "Every pound of copper production that we lose is one pound less for shell casings," he added.

Back to Work.

One development bearing on the manpower situation was an announcement from the Census Bureau that some 500,000 unemployed persons had gone back to work during September, bringing the total of unemployed down to 1,700,000, lowest level since 1929.

However, the back-to-work movement was more than equaled by the dual effects of the back-to-school and military service movements, and employment also declined during the month, dropping 2,100,000 to a total of 52,400,000 persons.

Agricultural employment declined by 1,000,000 persons between August and September to 10,200,000. Most of this decline, as well as that in non-agricultural employment, was among men since the return of girls to school was offset by the employment of older women, the Census Bureau said.

The bureau's figures on unemployed do not include, of course, the thousands of women and others who ordinarily do not seek not genuine, there will be no soap, as the expression goes.

"Those laws were passed by the 48 states to protect laborers from being lured away from their homes by irresponsible persons. The reason for the laws is explained very adequately in John Steinbeck's book 'Grapes of Wrath.'"

"Too many laborers were being lured away from their native hearths and were being left stranded far away from home."

"The United States Employment Service was established to handle just such situations and it is doing so, in a very able way with the hearty co-operation of all the states."

"Mr. Freedman's personnel director should know about the modern laws on employment."

Weston must have some particular reason for preferring Georgia farm labor, having some south this far when a heavy stone's throw across the river in New York City there were, at last estimate, some 400,000 unemployed—the highest rate in the nation.

As a matter of fact, the illustrious Kaiser, who builds ships with a flick of the wrist, recently came all the way from the state of Washington to New York to hire some 50,000 persons.

As a result of having fallen behind in deliveries, Freedman said he sent Floyd Weaver, a Negro foreman, to Georgia to hire workers at the prevailing wages of $30 a week for 40 hours a week.

When Weaver reported he had a dozen likely workers, Freedman on Saturday sent Weston, to look them over and bring them back if they seemed satisfactory.

On Monday, Freedman continued, Weston called that he was un-

RAILROADERS REGISTER—Representatives at the American Short Line Railroad Association were busy registering yesterday at the Biltmore. J. H. Hunt, secretary and treasurer, is discussing a few details with Miss Christine Harris (left) and Mrs. Sarah Mosteller at the registration desk. Hunt praised railroads' wartime work.

And-Or Definition Of Short Rail Line

What is a short-line railroad? The answer, as given by a former president of the association, is a good answer.

"It is a railroad that is short in distance or funds and/or both."

Jobs. Thus the nation's reserve of potential workers is much greater than the total of the "unemployed."

On the basis of the 1940 census, Census Director J. C. Capt. estimated that the principal labor reserve is composed of about 30,000,000 persons between the ages of 18 and 65. He estimated that approximately 8,000,000 of these would be needed as either workers or fighters if the war program reached the same proportionate level it did during World War I.

14 More Czechs Executed In Prague and Bruenn

LONDON, Oct. 8.—(AP)—The Czechoslovak government-in-exile said today that 14 more Czechs by Nazi occupation authorities had been executed in Prague and Bruenn.

Two Czechs were shot on charges of possessing firearms and listening to foreign broadcasts, three for alleged black market dealings and nine were accused of crimes committed in a blackout, it said.

Rails Ready To Meet War Need, They Say

Not Caught Napping by Emergency, Delegates Told Here.

The railroads are prepared to take care of any and all jobs they might be called on to do in connection with the war effort, J. H. Hunt, secretary and treasurer of the American Short Line Railroad Association, said here yesterday as the annual meeting got under way at the Biltmore hotel.

"The railroads were prepared for this emergency," Hunt pointed out, "because they had been preparing for months. They were called on to handle the extra freight and troops of wartime."

"Everything is working smoothly now as the railroads handle more passengers and freight than ever before."

He compared the record with that of the last war during which traffic on the roads became jammed and the government stepped in.

"There isn't much equipment being used," Hunt said, "but with the methods used to load freight the equipment is taking care of all needs for the war effort and essential industries and can continue to do so."

"Loading freight to the maximum results in delay in some cases, but the plan is working out well. The Army, of course, has preference in moving troops and supplies."

"There is little comparison between World War I and this one," he went on. "The railroads are clearing much more freight and more troops than ever."

Eastman To Speak.

Registration of representatives, a luncheon, banquet and board meeting were held yesterday. Joseph B. Eastman, director of the Office of Defense Transportation, will speak to the 150 delegates from throughout the nation today.

Other speakers will be Colonel W. J. Williamson, chief of the traffic control division, War Department; J. B. Hill, president of the Southern Railway; and Bert C. Bertram, sub-director of railroads for WPB.

Record Small Kerosene Purchases, OPA Advises

Kerosene retailers were advised by the regional OPA yesterday to "keep books for pint-sized purchasers."

Many retailers, said Regional Rationing Chief Harry Sommers, have been doubtful about making sales in quantities as small as a pint. The methods used to load freight the equipment is taking care of all needs for the war effort and essential industries and can continue to do so."

Sommers suggested that the retailers issue "due bills" to the purchasers entitling them to additional small amounts without surrendering another coupon.

Mrs. Marion Mills, 52, Of Brookhaven, Dies

She is also survived by three other sons, W. W. Mills, of Miami, Fla.; Thomas M. Mills, of Fort Bragg, N. C.; and Carl A. Mills, of Cuba; one daughter, Miss Ruth Mills, of Miami, and three grandchildren.

The body will be taken to Augusta by Awtry & Lowndes for funeral and burial.

Completely Subject Status Is Indicated For Denmark

LONDON, Oct. 8.—(AP)—Evidence was accumulating tonight that Germany is about to make Denmark a completely subjugated state.

German-occupied for two years and a half, yet nominally self-governed and maintained as a showpiece of Nazi influence at its "best," Denmark was believed marked down now for forced Nazification for these purposes:

"SLOW MADE" Kentucky Straight Bourbon Whiskey

As distillers, we believe "slow-made" whiskey is a better whiskey, because it is distilled by the longer, the unburned method that for generations has produced Kentucky's finest, smoothest whiskeys.

Because of its "slow-made" reputation, fully selected grains in Nelson County, Kentucky, were recommended to those who appreciate fine whiskey.

Burning Bomb To Be Featured At Five Points

Incendiary Handled by 'Miss Fire Prevention' Today.

A demonstration of how a blazing incendiary bomb should be handled will be made by city firemen and civilian defense officials at 1 o'clock this afternoon at Five Points as the climax to Fire Prevention Week.

The incendiary, a home-made affair whipped up especially for the occasion, will contain all the ingredients of an actual fire bomb. A platform has been arranged in three tiers for the show.

On top of the platform will be a metal sheet one-fourth of an inch thick. Below the metal tier a tub of water will be suspended and on the second tier—about eye-level from the street—will be a box of sand.

If the demonstration goes according to schedule, a huge lunch-hour crowd will see the incendiary burn its way through the metal sheet, drop through the tub of water and land in the sand box still burning.

Miss Dorothy Arnall, "Miss Fire Prevention," will shovel sand on the bomb to show how incendiaries can be rendered harmless until they burn out. Bob Zachary, master mechanic with the fire department, will explain each step in the procedure over a loud speaker system.

Sydney Jewett will be in charge.

Christian Adamant.

The efforts to obtain the consent of King Christian for the idea of a so-called Germanic confederation of Denmark, Norway and the Netherlands having failed, it was reported in a roundabout way that Hitler has summoned Herr Kanstein, the Gestapo chief for Norway, in order to make him reichskommissioner and impose the full collaboration which the Nazis demand.

Within the kingdom, Monday is likely to be a critical day. Then a new group of Danish Nazis is due to depart for the Russian front to fight for Germany. But recently returned puppet troops of this nature have been treated with scorn by patriotic Danes, and the new contingent may be kept at home to help in Nazification of the kingdom.

The Copenhagen newspaper Politiken has been saying that "all responsible Danes are against reckless action which might endanger the country," and urging that the people avoid large gatherings "which may easily lead to disturbances."

Nazis Take Notice.

From London meanwhile powerful radio transmitters carried to the subjugated continental peoples the newest Anglo-American planning for the post-war punishment of tyrants big and petty.

The Germans, pursuing their repressions in Norway and in western and eastern Europe as well, took immediate notice of Allied concurrence on a policy of calculated retribution. The German radio shouted back:

"These gentlemen should take heed lest one day Germany should adopt this decision for its own purposes and apply it to Mr. Roosevelt and other warmongers."

Yesterday the British lord chancellor, Lord Simon, announced that the British government had proposed creation of a United Nations commission to investigate war crimes with the object of fixing responsibility on "enemy individuals" . . . who ought to be dealt with as criminals.

"Ringleaders" Warned.

President Roosevelt, announcing American agreement with the proposal, said Allied victory terms would call for punishment of "ringleaders" responsible for organized murder and other atrocities.

Thus was foreshadowed post-war trial of Adolf Hitler himself for high crimes against humanity. A number of Britons were pleased that the announcements of policy drew a clearer line between the enemy peoples themselves and their warlords and quislings, and dealt a harsh blow to any hopes for a negotiated peace which might linger in the minds of European "collaborationists."

Free Belgian reports, meantime, told of a bomb explosion in a Brussels theater filled with Rexist and Flemish Nazis in which one person was killed and several injured. Inbel, the Free Belgian news agency, said also that forced labor had been ordered by the German military commandant for Belgium and northern France. The decree compared with that recently invoked by the Vichy regime to obtain French workers for German war plants.

From Czechoslovakia, the Czech government-in-exile received reports of 14 additional executions in Prague and Brunn.

Atlantan Unintentionally Clamps Lock on Tire Thief

Who is this guy Sherlock Holmes?

That's what DeKalb county police were asking yesterday after E. C. Sleadd, of 1650 Cornell road, captured a tire thief redhanded and without realizing what he had done.

Mr. and Mrs. Sleadd, who live with Mrs. Charles A. Moye at 1650 Cornell, drove downtown Wednesday night. When they returned, Mrs. Moye's car was in one side of the double garage as usual. Sleadd drove in the other side and locked both doors.

Yesterday morning, as Sleadd started to work, he noticed a Negro youth hiding in the back of the garage. He called DeKalb police, who arrested the Negro, Willie Lee Hogan, of a Briarcliff road address, on a burglary charge.

DeKalb Police Chief J. T. Dailey said two tires were removed from the Moye car but were still in the garage.

of auxiliary firemen taking part in the show.

In front of the platform will be displayed the proper bomb fighting equipment for office or home—heavy gloves, a "bomb snatcher," dark glasses, bucket of sand, hoe, shovel and water hose.

City firemen will attend a meeting of Camp Fire Girls at 3:30 o'clock this afternoon at the Peachtree Christian church to demonstrate the proper means of getting out an upper floor window of a burning building.

Student Captures Convict

T. L. Johnson Jr., 19-year-old student at Emory, knows how to get his man even if he hasn't yet been called into the Army, Fulton county police reported yesterday.

Arriving at his home on Peachtree Battle avenue Wednesday afternoon from his classes, the youth was told by his father's gardener that there was a convict hiding in a ravine in the rear of the house.

Taking his father's empty revolver, Johnson went to the ravine, captured the man and turned him over to Patrolmen A. J. Jackson and H. L. Elzey.

The convict was listed as Clarence Peppers, serving in the city work crew for disorderly conduct. He had run away from a project on the Bobby Jones golf course, it was said.

MRS. CHARLES STRIBLING MOTZ.

Miss Nancy Calhoun Marries Lt. Motz at Home Ceremony

The marriage of Miss Nancy Calhoun and Lieutenant Charles Stribling Motz, United States Naval Reserve, was solemnized yesterday afternoon at the West Peachtree road residence of Mrs. Andrew Calhoun, mother of the bride. The ceremony was performed at 5:30 o'clock by Dr. Edward G. Mackey, former pastor of the First Methodist church, and only the immediate relatives of the popular couple attended the impressive service.

Ornamental Decoration.

The ornamental decoration above the mantelpiece in the drawing room before which the bride and bridegroom plighted their troth, was a beautiful and original arrangement done by Mrs. Henry B. Tompkins. It was inspired by an eighteenth century trophée design so as to harmonize with the architecture of the Italian room, as well as to seem an integral part of the woodwork.

The design contained a lyre, a bow and arrow, a bird cage, and a violin, painted in the soft green tones of the room, and typifying the meaning of romance and music. A profusion of lilies, roses, gladioli and asters, in pink, white and lavender, trailed from the center of the artistic design. The marble consoles on each side of the mantelpiece were adorned with marble urns filled with Easter lilies.

Mrs. Fredric Minnich, sister of the bride, was matron of honor, and her gown featured an apple green satin bodice made with short sleeves and a square-cut neckline. Green satin bows were applied to the green chiffon skirt and she carried tuberose and pink roses.

The beautiful brunet bride was given in marriage by her brother, Abner W. Calhoun, with whom she entered the drawing room, and they were met at the altar by the bridegroom and his brother, Aubrey Motz Jr., of Habersham, Ga., who was best man.

The brunet loveliness of the bride was enhanced by her wedding gown of lustrous white satin, fashioned on lines exceedingly becoming to her slender figure. The bodice featured a square-cut neckline and long sleeves, and the full skirt graduated into a long and graceful train.

Her tulle veil was fastened to her wavy brown hair with a Dutch cap made of priceless real lace, which was worn by her mother on her wedding day, when, as the former Miss Mary Guy Trigg, of Chattanooga, Tenn., she became the bride of the late Andrew Calhoun, of Atlanta. The bride carried a white satin prayer book

Book Review Tea Takes Place Today.

Mrs. L. W. Robert III and Mrs. E. H. Buck will serve punch. Daisy Blackwell is in charge of arrangements.

decorated with white orchids and swainsona.

Mrs. Calhoun, mother of the bride, wore a model made of two-toned green crepe, the bodice fashioned with a square neckline and long sleeves. The pockets on the skirt were embroidered with gold and silver threads and a beaded design. Her costume was accented with purple orchids worn on her shoulder.

Mrs. Aubrey Motz, mother of the bridegroom, was gowned in moss rose crepe, the bodice being embroidered across the shoulders with gold and silver beaded design, and her flowers were orchids.

Mrs. Roby Robinson Jr., sister of the bride, was gowned in fern-green lace posed over green chiffon, and her flowers were gardenias.

Reception After Ceremony.

Mrs. Calhoun entertained at an elegant reception after the ceremony for the bride and bridegroom, and they received their guests in the drawing room. Enrico Leide conducted the orchestra which presented the wedding march and the musical program during the reception.

An antique copper bowl holding yellow and bronze chrysanthemums, astidistria leaves and cat-tails, beautified the table in the library, and magnolia leaves were arranged in the fireplace. The antique stone urns on the table in the spacious hall were filled with magnolia leaves, yellow calla lilies and chrysanthemums.

A handsome brocade silver runner extended the length of the dining room table, and the crystal container in the center held white roses, asters, gladioli, tuberose, carnations and funkia leaves. White tapers gleaming in antique Venetian crystal candelabra flanked the centerpiece. The three-tiered wedding cake frosted in valley lilies, was encircled at the base with tuberose and swainsona. The cake was placed on a silver platter on a small table in the dining room, and it was flanked with ruby glass urns filled with white flowers.

Lieutenant and Mrs. Motz departed for Miami after the reception, and will remain there until the bridegroom receives further orders. The bride traveled in a stylish poudre blue woolen suit, worn with a blue felt hat to match, brown accessories, a blue and brown tweed coat and sable furs. Lieutenant Motz is aviation instructor in the United States Naval Reserve Corps.

MY DAY: A Grandson Enters Nursery School

By Eleanor Roosevelt.

CHICAGO, Ill., Wednesday.—Monday evening in Seattle I spoke at a meeting sponsored by the Women's War Savings League. In Seattle and throughout the state they are attempting to obtain a very large membership in this league. Every member promises to save all he can and to put in war savings bonds and stamps at least 10 per cent of the family income.

Mrs. Langley, the Governor's wife, was present and handed me a membership in the league. I liked Miss Marie Young, who is doing the organization work. I hope they will be very successful in this state, especially since my daughter has taken the honorary chairmanship. I often find, and her experience seems to be similar to mine, that honorary chairmanships are usually honorary only in name. You have to work, and work hard, if the enterprise is to be successful and really want to see success.

Yesterday morning, in Seattle, we took my three-year-old grandson, Johnny Boettger, to nursery school. This school is organized on a co-operative basis. The fathers have made most of the equipment and the mothers are taking turns helping the teacher. Johnny seemed quite happy and did not even bother to say good-bye to us.

I left Seattle in the afternoon and was seen off by the entire family. I felt sad, as I always do, to say good-bye, but was very grateful for the happy days we had together. These are times in which one feels one must cherish every opportunity to see those one loves and to be happy with them.

On this trip I have managed, while traveling, to do quite a little reading. A very charming book came to me just before I left, called "Little Sister Su," a Chinese folk tale translated by Madame Chiang Kai-shek. The illustrations are delightfully done.

Folk tales, I suppose, always have a moral. This one ends with the prospective bridegroom is challenged by his lady fair to write the second line of a couplet. The first line she wrote as "Closing door, shut out moon from windows." Aided by his father-in-law, the young man finally wrote, "Throwing stone, open up sky in waters." Thereby he wins his wife, perhaps because it is better to open up the sky than to shut out the moon.

Perhaps the underlying moral is that every woman likes to prove that her husband is a little better or cleverer or wiser than she. This lady fair was found to test her man until she was sure of his ability, even where she thought herself supreme.

There is an interesting diary written by Alice Brady, called "Children Under Fire." In this she recounts her experiences on a number of crossings from England to this country with children who were to find homes here for the duration of the war. Many of them were under the care of the United States Committee for the Care of European Children. Anyone not familiar with the problems and history of this activity will find this book worth reading.

Gas Rationing Forces Movie Stars To Seek Homes Near Studios

By Harold Heffernan.

HOLLYWOOD, Oct. 8.—Come November 22 and Hollywood once again will become the place where the movie stars live.

On that date, or thereabouts, the government's wartime rationing of gasoline as a tire-saving weapon becomes effective. And no community in the nation will be so drastically affected by the order. From Malibu, Brentwood, Santa Monica, the San Fernando Valley and other distant points—some have been driving 50 miles to and from their studios—the screen toilers are frantically on the move. They are heading "close-in" so they can walk, pedal a bike or share-a-ride to the scene of their picture-making labors.

Today, as a result of this concerted moving by Hollywood's approximately 26,000 workers, there is a "no vacancy" sign on practically every available apartment within a couple of miles of each major studio. Bungalows, houses, hotels, also are filling up, with a long waiting list for many. Rents, however, are comparatively reasonable because of the government ceiling.

Thus comes to an end a 25-year cycle that has witnessed the movie folks buying lots in subdivisions farther and farther from their studios so they could have more room and more peace and quiet.

Shortly thereafter, during the first World War, Hollywood Boulevard and Vine street became the official crossroad of filmland. Every name, big and little, would turn up during the day at one of the four corners for a bit of film news. Deals were made on the curb, producers did their own casting from the passersby, and business went on as usual under the California sky.

Actual film production took place only a few blocks away at Sunset and Gower streets. The original studio was the Christie, home of the comedies, and the location was a landmark that has always been associated with film making. Independent producers, ensconced in cubby holes, came out into the sunshine every so often for a quick picture, and eventually the neighborhood was tagged Poverty row.

Not far away, running along Gower street, Columbia steadily was developing into a major film plant. RKO then was FBO and was a mile or less down Gower street. Paramount was just around the corner on Vine between Sunset and Hollywood. In the other direction, down Sunset, several blocks from Columbia, Fox built a studio. It was within this area of a few square miles that Hollywood gained its early reputation. A few blocks to the west, but still within walking distance of the studios, stars like Valentino, Mabel Norman and Fatty Arbuckle built palatial homes up on Whitley Heights, which is just above the heart of Hollywood today. Then, somewhere around 1922, the migration went farther westward along Hollywood boulevard past La Brea into what was then the country estate area, and the more arid of the colony built ramshackle abodes up in the landsliding Laurel Canyon section.

Yes, the migration was getting a head start from the heart of Hollywood, and when the film folk headed toward Beverly Hills, Hollywood itself became an apartment house center, though the houses in the hills remained to be occupied by lesser lights.

Came talking pictures in 1928 and with them a desire for the ocean, and Malibu beach came to be recognized as an official film colony. Automobiles and good roads were now the mode of the day, and it was nothing for the movie gang to ride out to Lilyan Tashman's beach house, with its red and striped walls, for an evening's fun.

Not content to mix with the studio workers who had built small homes in the shadow of the valley studios, top stars like Al Jolson went in for large, rambling estates 15 miles down the road in Encino.

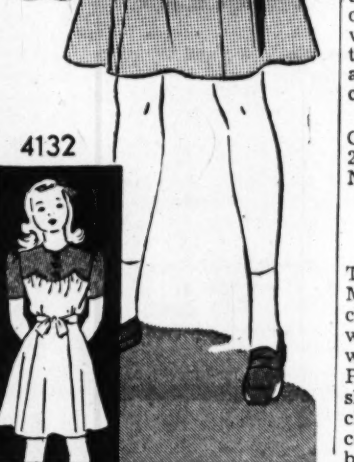

Then, what made so many film workers move out the other way, into Beverly Hills and toward the Beach? Studios and more studios were the reason. Metro-Goldwyn Mayer was near enough to Beverly Hills for comfort, and not far away was the Hal Roach and Selznick lots. And when Fox merged with Twentieth Century and a new studio was built, the location selected was Midway between Beverly Hills and M-G-M's Culver City. It was inevitable that new residential developments should spring up out that way—and over.

With the war, tire shortage and now gasoline rationing the big and little people—some 15,000, it is estimated—are flocking back to the shadow of their own studios. At least they're trying desperately to do so.

The idea's a good one—but, as we've mentioned before, there's a "no vacancy" sign on every piece of rental property in Hollywood. The town so ruthlessly deserted by its workers is now about to have the last laugh—after 25 years.

Outdoor Exercises Help Thin Girl To Gain Weight

By Ida Jean Kain.

Most thin girls think exercise is only for the fat girls. That's where they make their mistake. Actually, exercise is even more important to the underweight, for it is a means of building up the vitality.

The only way you can be strong and healthy is to use your muscles. Good muscle tone promotes a better functioning system. It follows that the thin girl benefits enormously from exercise—and especially from outdoor activity. It stimulates the appetite and makes for steadier nerves.

Your rule for gaining should be not less than one hour a day in the fresh air. It would be better to make it two hours. If you work in the city, get out in the country on Sundays.

Do you do any of these for recreation: Hiking, archery, golf, rowing, or swimming? Tennis and badminton are also fine sports, but you may have to work up to them.

The greater the nervous strain you are under, the more you need outdoor exercise. Health-minded movie girls who lose too many pounds under the strain of picture making gain back the lost weight on a program of outdoor activity that might strike you as strenuous. They're used to it. That's part of their plan for keeping fit.

Exercise should be alternated with plenty of rest. It is the rhythm of activity and relaxation that works magic. And, naturally, there is the matter of a good diet. Your exercise program is guaranteed to give you an appetite but you must see that you get the essential food elements. If you eat too many rich foods and do not get your full quota of vitamins and minerals, you cannot assimilate what you eat.

You need more calories and these should be in the easily digested foods—whole milk, cream, bread, butter, whole grain cereals, and light puddings with a custard sauce. You should be able to take 500 calories a day extra in these foods without taxing your digestive system. That many calories more than you use every day would enable you to gain one-half pound per week.

To keep from gaining in the wrong places, do a few specific exercises—backward arm circling for the shoulders and bust; stretching for the waist; leg swinging to control the hips and develop the thighs.

Extra large, stamped, return envelope with plenty of postage for these leaflets: "Stretch the Fat From Waistline, Ribs, Wishbone" and "Hips, Hips—Away."

Knowing Girl Is Waiting Will Boost Morale Of the Service Man

By Dixie George.

Dear Dixie:
Five years ago I dated a man and he drank so much that one night I told him never to come to my home in that condition again.

Later he told me he had stopped, so I let him come back. He slipped again, so then I began dating another boy whom the first man did not like. The second one asked me to marry him, but I refused. The first one moved to another state and I saw him only once a year when he came back home. I paid very little attention to him on these visits until one time when he was here when we had such a fine time. Last year he came back and told me he would have to go into the Army and wanted me to marry him. Since he was going away I did not think it would be a very good idea, so I promised him I would wait for him. He wrote me every week and often asked me if I had changed my mind about marrying him. I had to tell him I had, for my mother did not approve.

I have dated others, but I still love him and I want him back. He has told me he trusted and loved me more than any girl he ever knew and it would break his heart if I did not wait for him. I have never told him I loved him, but after I wrote and told him I had tried to forget him and couldn't, his letters ceased. I finally wrote again and told him I cared for him, but I have had no answer. I have got to get him back, for I know that I can never love another. Would it be all right to write and tell him the whole story, that my mother did not want me to continue going with him because of his drinking? And that I really love him and want to wait for him?

If he is a habitual drunkard I do not think there will be any hope of changing him, but I think from your letter that he must have taken only an occasional drink. The Army will make him snap out of that. You have been so undecided about him that I suppose he thinks that he cannot depend upon you and your love. He probably thinks you do not love him. He has certainly tried to prove to you that he loves you. Since you realize now that you love him and that you have made a mistake, I would advise that you continue writing him. Do not place any of the blame upon your mother, although she did ask that you discontinue writing him. Tell him you realize your mistake and that you know he has been the only one for you over the period of years and that you will be waiting when he comes home. All the men in the service need something to boost their morale and to know that there is something and someone at home waiting for them.

CLEAN BREAK IS BEST

Dear Dixie:
I am in deep distress. I am in love with a married man with a child. I have been out with him several times. Each time I am with him, he tells me he loves me and so far has proven it. He loves his child very much, but does not seem to care anything for his wife, although he is good to her. She does not know about this affair and seems to like me very much. I have asked this man to stop seeing me, and for us to forget about each other, but he tells me that he will never be satisfied and that he loves me better than anybody else. I do not want to cause any trouble between this couple and do not want to break up their home. He is with me every chance he can get, and will not date anyone else, and it seems as if I am the only girl he has ever dated regularly. What must I do? Just give me a brief answer, please. What can I do to change his affection for me so that we can just be friends?

WORRIED.
The answer lies entirely with you, so to be brief, I will say stop seeing him and that will solve everything. You should not have begun going with him in the first place so you must remember it is all your own fault. If you do not want to break up the home, then you better change your way of living at once, for you are certainly headed in that direction. You are being very silly saying that you have asked him to stop seeing you. A woman does not "ask a man to stop." She tells him she will not see him and refuses his dates. If he still lives with his wife and child, I do not see what makes you think he has proved his love for you. If he loved you, he would prove it by divorcing his wife and asking you to marry him.

Army Rank Elevation Decides Wedding Date for Couple

ALTHOUGH PRETTY Marney Sampson and Lieutenant Thomas M. Swift III have known each other about a year, they decided just ten days ago that they would marry on the 17th of October. They previously determined that they would wait until after the World War to plight their troth. But, it all came about in this way:

Marney journeyed up to North Carolina to visit Lieutenant and Mrs. R. W. Heuman in Southern Pines, where the bridegroom-elect is on duty with the 14th Field Artillery. While she was there, Tom was elevated from the second lieutenant to a first lieutenant's rank, with an increase in salary for good measure. All of this good luck coming together, brought about their determination to marry this month.

Marney chose October 17

which to take her marriage vows with Tom, because this is her favorite month. She considers it the most beautiful one on the calendar, and always said she wanted to wed in the harvest month.

To Harold Hoefman, who was Tom's boss before he joined the Army, goes the credit for being the matchmaker. Tom was working for the Atlanta machinery company managed by Mr. Hoefman, and he it was who introduced the betrothed couple. It must have been "love at first sight" for Marney decided then and there Tom was the "only one," and Tom knew he had met the "only girl."

The bride-elect's engagement ring is a scintillating solitaire diamond and has a great deal of sentiment surrounding its history. It is one of the three gems contained in the engagement ring belonging to Mrs. Thomas M. Swift Jr., of Elberton, who is Tom's mother. It was given to her by Mr. Swift and one of the stones will be kept for her daughter, Margaret Swift, and the other will go to Chris Swift, their other son.

Bishop John Moore Walker will perform the ceremony at the noon hour in St. Luke's church, and Mrs. Harold Hoefman will be matron of honor for the bride-elect. Marney will marry in a blue gown, because blue is Tom's favorite color, and one that is very becoming to the blond beauty of the bride-elect.

Marney is the only daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Harold H. Sampson, and she is very attractive and popular. She is of medium height, is slender and graceful, has a wealth of blond hair, and violet-blue eyes. She is noted for her graceful carriage, and wears her clothes with distinction. Best of all, the bride-elect knows how to cook whenever the occasion demands a test of her ability.

MRS. ARTHUR MADISON and her sister, Mrs. Thomas J. Casey, are enjoying the exciting adventure of a happy reunion after a separation of nearly two years. The latter, with her husband, Commander Casey, and their son, five-year-old Ward and 10-month-old Tim, arrived early this week from Coronado, Cal.

Commander Casey's presence here is "between train," so to speak, for he leaves this afternoon for New York, where he will assume executive duties with a new ship. He will be accompanied by Mrs. Casey, who will remain with him for the next two months, after which she will return here to make her home for the duration. During her absence, Ward and little Tim will remain with Mr. and Mrs. Madison at their home on Woodward way.

LIEUTENANT AND MRS. WILTON B. SPENCE.

Lieutenant and Mrs. Spence were photographed following their recent marriage, solemnized at the Protestant chapel, Naval Operating Base, Norfolk, Va. The bride is the former Miss Virginia Clay Fenger, lovely young daughter of Commander and Mrs. Henry C. Fenger, of the Naval Operating Base at Norfolk. Lieutenant Spence, a former Atlantan, is with the U. S. Naval Reserve. He and his bride are residing in Norfolk, following their wedding journey.

Commander Casey's stay at Coronado was for a short time only, having gone there from Honolulu, where he was on duty for a year and a half. He was aboard the ill-fated Lexington as a member of Admiral Brown's staff the second of its last assignment. It was on this particular task force attack on the Gilbert and Marshall islands that Lieutenant Commander "Butch" O'Hare distinguished himself so brilliantly by bringing down an extraordinary number of Jap planes. Commander Casey was an eyewitness of this thrilling and courageous feat.

Mrs. Casey also came in for her share of excitement, too. For at the time of the disastrous bombing of Pearl Harbor she was confined to a hospital with little Tim, who was just one week old on December 7. Commander and Mrs. Casey will entrain this afternoon at 2 o'clock, immediately after an informal gathering in the Mirror Room of the Capital City Club, with Mr. and Mrs. Madison as hosts. Yesterday afternoon they also were honored informally by Mr. and Mrs. Madison, a group of neighbors having assembled to meet them at the hosts' home on Woodward way.

Atlanta is fortunate, indeed, that Mrs. Casey plans to return for residence, even though temporarily. The former Ellen Phelps, of Evanston, Ill., she possesses an outstanding personality, her charm immediately captivating everyone with whom she comes in contact. Mrs. Madison, who was Sally Phelps prior to her marriage, is endowed with similar delightful qualities, having won the admiration of countless friends ever since adopting Atlanta as her home.

Fuller, and the groom is the son of the late Mr. and Mrs. Fred Schmidt.

Father F. Marion Perry officiated at 7:30 o'clock and during the ceremony a musical program was presented on the organ. The chancel was banked with palms and white flowers, and the altar was held with white gladioli and white dahlias, and similar flowers were used in the floor baskets at the chancel entrance.

The ushers-groomsmen were Winburn Mitcham, William Gasque, Calvin McMillan, Robert Andrews and Robert Fuller, brother of the bride. Miss Alice Bragg was the maid of honor and the bridesmaids were Misses Mary Scott, Ethel Greene, Mesdames Edwin Johnston, William Gasque, Winburn Mitcham. The attendants were gowned alike in aqua taffeta, the long skirts being corded in dubonnet velvet, and the bodices featuring full, puffed sleeves. Their flowers were arranged in Cascade bouquets of Joanna Hill roses, yellow pompon chrysanthemums and yellow and pink gladioli.

Mr. Fuller gave his daughter in marriage and Lieutenant Thomas Wood, of Napier Field, was the best man. The bride was beautifully gowned in cream-colored satin, outlined at the neck and waistline with narrow pleated ruffles,

Riding the Rails EN ROUTE TO MEMPHIS, Tenn., With Georgia, Oct. 8.—No danger of any of the current Georgia Bulldogs having ambitions to be traveling men.

If they thought their first day-coach ride to Louisville, for the Kentucky game, was a bit wearing, they had another thought coming after reaching Memphis, Tenn.-o-see, at a late hour Thursday.

Originally scheduled to leave Athens around 5:30 a. m.—which also lets them out as prospective milkmen—they clambered aboard a rattler two hours later, rolled through Atlanta, changed to another train in Birmingham, and at a late hour were at their destination.

If Ole Miss is much tougher than that ride, Georgia will be extended.

Nobody is complaining about railroad service; the railroads are doing a magnificent job in handling civilian trade as well as is being done.

Often the trains are not overcrowded. But schedules, due to many things involving the war effort, cannot be kept, for the most part, and trips are dragged out.

On the other hand, Americans are spoiled. We've all been sitting too long and too comfortably in the deep, plush lap of luxury.

An all-day coach ride is pretty soft in comparison with a lot of things that are happening in other parts of the world today.

And yet a little inconvenience causes strong men to use violent language and say other things that had best go unsaid when sacrifice is the order of the day.

Small sacrifice, indeed, is a train ride of any kind, including through freight.

It's a privilege.

Frankie May Step Frankie Sinkwich, a much-marked athlete, suffers physically in every Georgia game. I wouldn't say opponents are going out to get him, but it is only natural that they're keyed up to stop an ace.

In the Jacksonville Naval Air Station game at Macon, Sinkwich caught a knee on the opening kickoff. It was a most painful hurt while it lasted.

Last Saturday against Furman someone popped him in the nose and he bled quite a bit.

Up to now Frankie has played well enough when a victory was needed. His efforts beat both Kentucky and the Naval Air outfit.

But he really hasn't given an inspired performance. He may have been saving up for Ole Miss.

Sinkwich asked the boys to give him a birthday present in the form of a victory over the Rebels, but it's not like him to let somebody else in a football suit take the lead.

He may be planning to celebrate his own birthday with his top performance of the season.

Coch Wallace Butts believes he'll play his best game.

The Georgia team will have plenty of incentive to play a peak game, having had to stage a mighty rally to tie Ole Miss last year.

And the year before, of course, they weren't in the ball game after an early break gave Ole Miss a head start.

They're Ready Coach Butts accepts the veiled warning of Harry Mehre that Ole Miss is going to play some good football this season with the ready response that if the Bulldogs aren't ready for the Rebels they never will be.

If Butts' past record means anything, Georgia will take Ole Miss Saturday.

No team ever has beaten Butts two years in a row, and when he has lost and tied to a team, the Little Round Man's past history shows third time is the charm. His team wins.

The Bulldogs will show Saturday what the loss of Cliff Kimsey really means. His blocking and leadership have been missed. No denying it.

Harry J. Mehre, a fine football coach, has a reputation of being able to set for a team and win.

Saturday's game is the toughest Georgia has faced up to now, including the narrow win over Kentucky.

That meeting stemmed from a high school rivalry. The one coming up is big league stuff.

On the record, Georgia will rule the favorite, but past performance in such a game often means very little.

Once-beaten Ole Miss, playing in a most friendly atmosphere, might actually have a psychological edge.

I think Georgia will win, but it may take a lot of football to do it.

Naval Air Station Loses Three Men

JACKSONVILLE, Fla., Oct. 8.—(P)—Three stalwarts were lost to the Jacksonville Naval Air Station grid squad when Center Emmitt Ray, Right Halfback Attilio Ferdinzi and Tackle Lewis Padgett received orders to report for Marine duties elsewhere.

The coaching staff admitted the trio's going will weaken the team. "Ray, Ferdinzi and Padgett were three of the hardest working men on the squad," said Lieutenant Gobbs Adams, head mentor. "I know they'll make fine records in the Marine Corps."

Whether they will be able to make their farewell appearance in the game here Sunday with Spence Field (Ga.) was not known.

Leading Scorer In S.E.C. Injured

LEXINGTON, Ky., Oct. 8.—(P)—Gene Meeks, Kentucky's "spot" offensive star and leading scorer in the Southeastern Conference, suffered a possible concussion of the right kidney in practice yesterday and was carried from the field on a stretcher and taken to Good Samaritan hospital.

Meeks was hurt while blocking for a punter. An onrushing player fell on him. This is the second injury he has suffered this season. A few days before the first practice, he accidentally rammed his arm through a window pane and severed a tendon.

It was not immediately determined whether the sophomore halfback would be lost for the Vanderbilt game here Saturday.

Georgia Seeks 1st Victory Over Ole Miss Saturday

Bulldog Team Primed To Stop Rebel Passing

Ehrhardt and Dudish Will Start Against Mehre's Eleven.

By JACK TROY, Constitution Sports Editor. ENROUTE MEMPHIS, TENN., With Georgia, Oct. 8.—Prepared to stop the aerial thrusts of the Ole Miss ace, Chunkin' Charley Conerly, Georgia's traveling squad of 36 Bulldogs is eager to break the Rebel jinx Saturday in Crump stadium.

Georgia has never been ahead of Ole Miss and the best effort yet was last year's 14-14 tie.

It is becoming a rather sore point with the Bulldogs that they trail every time they meet Harry Mehre's team. They hope to do something about it this time.

Steady improvement has been shown by the Georgia sophomore ace, Charley Trippi, and while the Rebels spend their time giving Frankie Sinkwich personal attention, Trippi may be the fair-haired boy.

DAVIS DANGEROUS.

Lamar Davis is aching to run a punt back for a touchdown.

Chances are pretty slim of Conerly kicking the ball anywhere near Davis, but if he makes a mistake, it may well prove fatal. When Davis grabs a punt the Bulldogs provide a lot of solid blocking to clear the way.

For their defensive skill against passes, Clyde Ehrhardt and Andy Dudish will be rewarded by starting posts and will be in action most of the time when the Rebels are in a position to ignite aerial bombs.

While the Bulldogs have not beaten Ole Miss in two previous games, they will go into Saturday's game as the favorite. This is based largely on their having won three games this season. Ole Miss lost last week to Georgetown. The Rebels defeated Western Kentucky Teachers in the opener.

LLOYD PRIMED.

Fullback Sonny Lloyd, another first-year man, is scheduled to see action.

The Georgia squad is in fine shape and Captain Frankie Sinkwich, who has asked a victory as a birthday present, may lead the way himself.

He usually does.

The Bulldogs will run through signals and practice a few kick-offs tomorrow. Leo Costa will keep his toe in shape for extra points that may be needed.

Saturday's game begins at 3:15, Atlanta time.

Morris Brown Primes Attack For Lincoln 11

Lincoln University of Missouri, headed by Coach William Burghardt with 32 players, arrived at Morris Brown College late yesterday afternoon for the intersectional football classic between Morris Brown and Lincoln University Saturday afternoon. The game will start at 2:30 p. m. at Ponce de Leon park and will officially open the Wolverine season at home.

The game is rated as the No. 1 attraction of the nation in Negro football. Lincoln has always maintained the reputation as one of the leading teams in the Midwest and comes here with one of the most versatile outfits to ever represent the Missouri institution.

Coaches Nicks and Lockhart will taper off training this afternoon. Carefully planning a new type of offense that has been underway since preseason practice, Morris Brown coaches used only a select bunch of plays against Tuskegee last Saturday. It is expected that the Wolves will open up against Lincoln.

Only a light limbering-up exercise and punting signals will take place this afternoon. Tickets are on sale at the business office of Morris Brown College on the campus.

Rams Sympathize With Yankee Nine

NEW YORK, Oct. 8.—Football Coach Earl Walsh, whose Fordham Rams were drubbed, 40-14, by Tennessee last Saturday, can sympathize with Manager Joe McCarthy, of the New York Yankees.

"I didn't get back in time to see the World Series, but from what I hear, it was simply a case of a gang of hustlers sweeping right over a bunch of contented champs," said Walsh.

"That's exactly what happened to us last week against Tennessee."

LION LEADS NATION—This is twisting, squirming Paul Governali, Columbia back who has passed and rushed his way to a 454-yard total to lead the nation in gains. Most of his yardage came on his passing—against Ft. Monmouth and Maine.

Yard-Gainers Pennant, World Series Of Nation Led By Governali

ST. LOUIS, Oct. 8.—(P)—Winning the National League pennant and the World Series is all that saved the St. Louis Cardinals' far-flung organization from heavy financial losses this year, President Sam Breadon said today.

As it turned out the organization will show a "small profit," he said, explaining the parent club's regular season and World Series profits were cut considerably by unusually heavy losses by Cardinal minor league teams.

"Only one of our 13 owned minor league clubs—Columbus—had a profit this year," Breadon disclosed. "This club, which won the American Association championship and the Little World Series playoff, registered a modest profit."

The Sacramento team in the Pacific Coast League was the second best team financially and it finished in the red, Breadon declared.

He said he did not yet know just how much the club would receive from the World Series, but "it is not as much as many persons imagine."

Home attendance for Cardinal games this year was approximately 550,000.

Gators Lose Two For Auburn Tilt

GAINESVILLE, Fla., Oct. 8.—(P)—Florida's slim hopes for a football victory over the favored Auburn Plainsmen received a setback today with the disclosure by Coach Tom Lieb that two key players were on the injury list and probably would not see action in Saturday night's game.

They are Bill Latsko, quarterback and one of the team's few good blockers, and Jim Pratt, 200-pound tackle. Latsko is suffering from a severe bruise and Pratt is in the hospital under observation for a possible internal injury.

Nevertheless, the team exhibited snap and precision today in running through an intensive workout that included dummy scrimmage against Auburn passing plays.

Thomson Scores Ace on-the-Fly

Here's one for the books: M. A. Thomson, playing the second hole of the No. 1 course at East Lake, socked a five-iron shot and the ball flew straight into the cup without even touching the green, much less the rough or fairway. The hole is 146 yards long.

Sam Smith, J. R. Neal and Judge Ralph McClelland, who were playing with Thomson, witnessed the event and backed up his story in the clubhouse afterwards. The ace was the first of his career.

Four Prep Grid Games Scheduled Here Tonight

By HENRY DAILEY. Four choice ball games and plenty of thrilling action are on the menu for prep football enthusiasts tonight. G. M. A. Cadets will make their first G. I. A. A. start of the season against Tech High in the feature tilt at 8 o'clock out at Ponce de Leon park. The Decatur Bulldogs will entertain Athens High, defending state Class B champs, at 8:15 o'clock, and North Fulton will play host to the powerful Red Elephants of Gainesville at 8 o'clock at Buckhead. Another local brawl brings together Richardson High and Fulton High, a couple of N. G. I. C. teams, at 8 o'clock on the East Point gridiron.

Marist will be in Chattanooga, Tenn., this afternoon for a tussle with Baylor, Boys' High and Russell have open dates this week but both will be back in action next week, the Purples against G. M. A. and the 'Cats against Richardson.

The G. M. A. Smithie tilt should develop into one of the closest games of the season. The fast-moving Tech High eleven has finally gotten its offense to clicking after a slow start and if their two star halfbacks, George Vlass and Grady Boles are in form, the Cadets will be in for a rough evening.

The Cadets of G. M. A. are probably the most improved team in Atlanta. With seven lettermen back from last year's mediocre team and a host of fine-looking newcomers, Captain "Doc" McKay's outfit may score an upset. George Foster, center; Red Mackey, fullback, and Buddy Wilkins, guard, are the best of the veterans. Wilkins played in the backfield last year, but has been shifted to the line and has shown up well.

Coach Wayman Tucker's North Fulton will be set for a close contest with the Gainesville team. The Elephants downed West Fulton, 20-0, two weeks ago and the Bulldogs beat the Owls only 13-0 in the season's opener.

Although Richardson has a tie with Newnan to its credit, both teams will be seeking their first victory when the Rams and the Redbirds clash at East Point.

TODAY'S PREP SCHEDULE.

Tech High vs. G. M. A. at Ponce de Leon, 8 o'clock.
Decatur vs. Athens at Decatur, 8:15 o'clock.
North Fulton vs. Gainesville at North Fulton, 8 o'clock.
Richardson vs. Fulton at East Point, 8 o'clock.
Marist vs. Baylor at Chattanooga, Tenn., (afternoon).
Russell vs. G. M. A. "B" at College Park (afternoon).

END DRILLS.

CAMBRIDGE, Mass., Oct. 8.—(P)—All of the Harvard varsity football squad members who are earmarked for service against William and Mary completed their serious preparations for the powerful southerners today during a long but light drill.

Miss Mayer Beats Mrs. Tumlin, 1 Up

Miss Rosalie Mayer defeated Mrs. W. D. Tumlin, 1 up, in 19 holes in the feature match of the Atlanta Woman's Golf Association tournament yesterday at Druid Hills.

Miss Llewellyn Wilburn turned back Mrs. Albert Donaud, 2 and 1; Mrs. O. B. Keeler defeated Mrs. Sydney Smith 2 and 1, and Mrs. L. H. Kelley beat Mrs. W. S. Eakin, 1 up.

Today's semi-final matches pit Mrs. Keeler against Mrs. Kelley, and Miss Mayer against Miss Wilburn. Play will begin at 10 o'clock.

Approaching, putting and driving contests will be held in the afternoon.

Tech Shows Improvement in Scrimmage

FROM NOW ON.

What will happen from now until December in sport, so far as attendance goes? After December no one but a wild and woolly prophet even will attempt to guess.

The two main sports left are football and racing, and transportation will be the main barrier to face. The answer is, that with few exceptions, only the big cities within easy or quick reach of the turnstiles, will keep close to the old mark.

The Midwest is almost certain to take the lead, with Michigan, Minnesota, Notre Dame and Ohio State in the van—not so far from other years. There will be a drop, but not a steep one, in many places.

In the east, Pennsylvania should lead the others with a good season.

In the south, Alabama, Georgia Tech, Tennessee, Vanderbilt and Tulane will get by nicely in Birmingham, Atlanta, Knoxville, New Orleans and Nashville.

But football, this season, won't be played for crowds and gate receipts. It will be a game for conditioning, national morale and what it will mean for future service work.

Close to 210,000 spectators saw the three Cardinal-Yankee World Series games in New York. But there was no transportation problem involved. It will be different in many places from now on. And only the headlines will get much trade.

Sport and War.

More and more war will crowd in upon the sporting program. In the next few months it is my guess that war will take away most of those who are still left in the professional and amateur field. Either they can't stay out—or they won't stay out.

The first big casualty list will upset all theories advanced by those who say that sport must go along as usual. Sport will go along, but not as usual. It will go along only as far as it helps the matter of winning the war.

What about those with dependents—with wives and children? Unfortunately, war recognizes no such obligations. It calls for the best each country has, regardless of any other factor.

How Tough They Were.

Here are a few details showing how tough the Cardinals were to take—

1. Their crack pitcher, Morton Cooper, is knocked out twice. What of it?

2. Two Yankee pitchers, Red Ruffing and Spud Chandler, each hold the Cards to a single clean hit through eight innings. What of it?

3. The Cards give the Yankees six outs in one inning and the Yankees can't score. That was the payoff.

Random Firing.

Reserves Again Look Better Than Varsity

Eaves and Healey Feature Line Play of Second-Stringers.

By JOHNNY BRADBERRY.

There was a noticeable improvement in Georgia Tech's first team yesterday as Coach Bill Alexander sent his Notre-Dame conquerors through their third hard scrimmage of the week. But once again, the so-called first team left it to the reserves to stage the best exhibition of football.

The first-stringers took the field first against the Red Devils and worked on defense against Chattanooga's running and passing plays. They looked a great deal better than in Wednesday's workout but still didn't seem up to par.

The reserves replaced them after a half-hour or so and from then on it was a cold-day-in-the-know-when the Red Devils broke loose for much gain. Leading the charge of the second-stringers were Sterling Eaves, the old boys' high star, and Bill Healey, the freshman from Marietta. Both these boys charged in time and again from their tackle and guard positions to break up plays before they developed.

Eaves improves.

Eaves has shown a lot of improvement since coming to Tech and has been making the first-string tackles step for their jobs this season. Healey, while inexperienced, looks as a sure-fire workhorse in later games when things are getting tough and football trends to become old to some of the veterans.

Railbirds at the practice spent most of the afternoon wondering just how the first team could look so good the week before the Notre Dame game and so lousy the week after. But none were worried to the point of cashing in their blue chips. They figured everything would be okay just as soon as the boys recover their full strength and forget the Irish battle.

Truth is that the Jacket varsity was called on to play a lot of football at South Bend and it left a lot of football on the field there. You can't keep a team to such a sharp edge for three weeks hand-running and then expect to do anything with the last half of the schedule. That is as good reason as any why things are not quite as rosy at Tech this week as they have been.

KICKING DRILL. Before the scrimmage, the varsity was sent through a long session practicing blocking for the kicker. Jimmy Luck and Rabbit Jordan must have been given ample protection because they were kicking 55 and 60-yard spirals down the field consistently.

The Tech team is in good shape for Chattanooga. Wilbur Stein, the only injury from last Saturday, was back in harness and took part in some of the rough stuff. The Techs will go through their usual light Friday workout today.

West Fulton Upsets Commercial High, 12-0

By BERT PRATHER.

Coach Vic Hansard's West Fulton Owls assured themselves of a successful season last night at North Fulton park when they stepped out of their league to defeat a favored Commercial High eleven, 12 to 0, on a pair of quick second-quarter touchdowns.

West Fulton, an affiliate of the N. G. I. C., sewed up the contest in the second quarter when Roy Hartfield, brilliant little halfback, skirted right end for 15 yards and a touchdown.

This marker would have been enough, but just to make sure of the victory, Ralph Bennett, Owl right half, intercepted a long Commercial pass near the middle of the second period and lugged it 60 yards down the sidelines to the 11 before being hauled down.

On the very next play Jim Dickey swung wide around left end for the remaining 11 yards and the second and final score of the night. The try for extra point on the Owl five-yard line was blocked and the second conversion attempt went wide of the uprights.

Although held scoreless, Commercial was in the ball game most of the way. The red-clad warriors piled up plenty of yardage between the 20-yard lines, and bad breaks probably cost them a pair of touchdowns. In the opening minutes of the first quarter the Commercial boys marched down to within the Owl five-yard line only to have a fumble put a stop to the apparent touchdown drive. After recovering, West Fulton immediately pulled out of this hole on a 35-yard dash by Dickey.

The Commercial gridders put on another goalward march late in the second quarter, but this time the clock caught them with the ball resting one foot away from the double stripes.

Captain Ed Fisher, a regular end who was switched to quarterback, was the outstanding ground-gainer for the losers. Crumley at tackle and Bohannon, the fullback, were other performers to stand out for the G. I. A. A. club.

West Fulton's aces were Dickey, Walt Crawford, Hartfield and Bennett.

The loss was the fourth straight for Commercial, which has yet to score a touchdown this season. West Fulton has won two and lost two, so far this season.

Hapeville Smashes Canton High, 31-6
Hapeville's Hornets broke into the win column for the first time this season when they stung the Canton High Greenies 31-6 last night at the Russell High field.

Forest Gerrard, Hapeville's star end, led the scoring with three touchdowns, all of which were made after receiving passes tossed by E. Evans, Canton's quarterback. The other Hapeville boys to lug the leather across the goal line.

Linton added one extra point on a drive through the line to round out the home team's scoring. Canton got its lone touchdown in the third quarter on a run by Dobson.

Enright Includes 4 Frosh on Squad
COLUMBIA, S. C., Oct. 8.—(P) Coach Rex Enright, of the University of South Carolina, prime mover in a stymied attempt on the part of several Southern Conference colleges to obtain conference sanction for the use of freshmen on depleted wartime football squads, took the bull by the horns today when he entrained four yearlings along with varsity players for a game with West Virginia Saturday.

Enright said that whether he would use any of the four would depend on how the injury-riddled varsity squad stood up during the contest at Morgantown, W. Va. The West Virginians are not members of the conference, and Enright said he knew of no conference rule prohibiting use of first year men in a match with a non-member.

The Gamecock coach's move in including freshmen as prospective players Saturday without conference endorsement received strong endorsement from the South Carolina University's president, Dr. J. Rion McKissick.

NEW YORK, Oct. 8.—(P)—Miss Barbara, a bargain yearling at $700 for Movie Man Louis B. Mayer, defied nine other smart two-year-old fillies in the featured Tambour purse at Belmont Park today.

Coach Jack Meager will take 36 players on the trip, leaving in automobiles early tomorrow morning, stopping in Valdosta, Ga., to workout and spend the night.

'Bugs' Baer Says:

It is going to be tough to get the Japs out of the Aleutians. It's going to be tough to get them out of any place where there is woodwork.

The way the Japs swarm into places is something like the fellow who went into the bird and animal store and asked for a million roaches.

The bird man was so astonished that the customer explained he was moving and his lease said he had to leave the house in the same condition he found it.

That and the fact that the Japs don't surrender is going to make it a little tougher. But only for the Japs.

British Warn They'll Shackle Nazi Captives

Reprisal for German Treatment of Prisoners Threatened.

LONDON, Oct. 8.—(P)—The British threatened today to shackle a Nazi for every British prisoner the Germans put in chains ostensibly in retaliation for alleged, but denied and unproved, maltreatment of Nazis taken at Dieppe last August 19 and on the channel isle of Sark last Saturday night.

The Germans announced they had manacled their Dieppe prisoners—mostly Canadians—as scheduled at noon and the British war office, noting that Berlin ignored a suggestion to have the neutral Swiss make an impartial investigation, declared an equal number of Nazi prisoners would be treated in like manner beginning at noon Saturday—unless the Germans released the chained British prisoners.

It was stressed here that the supposedly offended power must initiate the request for an investigation by a neutral under terms of the 1929 Geneva convention providing for humane treatment of war prisoners.

Unofficial British sources, not conceding any mistreatment of German prisoners, pointed out also that the Geneva agreement did not deal with the question of binding prisoners temporarily as a safeguard during continuing action to prevent their return to the fighting.

The British had stayed their shackling plans momentarily while awaiting official confirmation from the German high command to the effect that the binding of British prisoners had been carried out as announced by less official Nazi sources.

The war office issued this communique tonight.

"The German government having put into operation the illegal action threatened in their communique, the war office announces that unless the German government releases prisoners captured at Dieppe from their chains, an equal number of German prisoners of war will be manacled and chained as from noon Saturday."

The Italian radio was significantly silent on the whole question of martial legalism for which the Germans profess admiration at times, and it was noted that the British held some 262,000 Italian nationals, most of them taken during the collapse of Mussolini's African empire south and east of Libya.

Silly Answers Turn Nazis From Ship Story
By The Associated Press.

The Navy announced yesterday the torpedoing of a British merchantman by an enemy U-boat in the Caribbean last month with the loss of only one crew member, raising to 486 the Associated Press total of Allied ships officially announced as sunk in the western Atlantic since declaration of war.

Captain James L. Holmes, skipper of the Canadian vessel, said that he had to caution his crew against giving "silly answers" when the submarine crew questioned his men after the torpedoing.

"I didn't want them to get the sub crew too irked," the captain said, when he and 22 other survivors reached an east coast port. "Everybody in the crew was giving a different reply."

U. S. Holds Key to Indian Problem, Moslem Says
NEW DELHI, India, Oct. 8.—(P)—Abdul Kasem Fazlul Huq, Moslem premier of Bengal, declared today it was the supreme duty of the United States to arbitrate existing differences between Britain and India.

Anyone wishing to join the club for regular recreation may call Miss Llewellyn Wilburn, of the physical education department at Agnes Scott, at Dearborn 2571.

Another new feature of the athletic program this fall is the inauguration of indoor skating. The physical education department is equipped with fifty pairs of roller skates, and special flooring has been laid in the gymnasium for skating.

Auburn Polishes For 'Gator Game
AUBURN, Ala., Oct. 8.—(P)—Auburn's Tigers went through their last workout today before leaving to oppose Florida in Gainesville Saturday night and only one player appeared doubtful of being in shape for the match.

Curtis Kuykendall, fleet-footed sophomore halfback, is still suffering from a collarbone injury and may see the entire game from the sidelines.

Coach Jack Meager will take 36 players on the trip, leaving in automobiles early tomorrow morning, stopping in Valdosta, Ga., to workout and spend the night.

'Cutthroat' Band Paved Way for Andreanof Landing

By LEO RARIDAN.

ALASKA DEFENSE COMMAND HEADQUARTERS, Oct. 8.—(INS)—"Castner's Cutthroats" paved the way for the recently announced American occupation of the Andreanof Islands in the Aleutians, Army Intelligence authorities disclosed today.

"Castner's Cutthroats" are a group of tough, hard-hitting, highly trained scouts of the Alaska Defense Command.

Officially they are known as a combat intelligence platoon, but the colorful name of "Castner's Cutthroats" was given them in tribute to their two-fisted, able commander, Lieutenant Colonel Lawrence V. Castner, son of Major General Joseph C. Castner, Alameda, Cal., a noted World War hero whose brigade routed the enemy at St. Mihiel.

Specialty of Tough Jobs. Like the United States Marine Raiders and the British Commandos, "Castner's Cutthroats" specialize in tough jobs.

Their first official mission—that of clearing the way for the American occupation of the Andreanofs, approximately 150 air miles from Jap-occupied Kiska island—was carried out under the most difficult conditions.

A large percentage of the members of "Castner's Cutthroats" are native Alaskan Indians and Eskimos so hardened to exposure that they insist on sleeping on open beaches instead of in barracks even when stationed at base camps.

Their skill and daring are reminiscent of the early-day American Indians and scouts of the plains.

They landed from small rubber boats and two specially built canvas canoes in the face of howling winds which sent waves cascading over them.

So rough were the seas in this landing that one of the rubber boats exploded, plunging two scouts into the water. They were immediately rescued by their companions.

As soon as they landed, the scouts established outposts, dismantled their boats and buried them in the sand with other equipment.

They made certain all trace of their landing was washed away by the tide before bivouacking in tall grass on high ground until dawn. Armed with machineguns, they then set out in two groups for an intensive survey of the entire island to determine whether it was occupied by the enemy.

Near-Clash Averted. Skillfully they kept to the short tundra which sprung back into position, obliterating their footprints.

The only sign of the enemy was a single-motored Japanese plane which passed over the island about the headquarters of a mile from the spot where the scouts were hiding.

Hour after hour for days, the two groups of scouts crept silently through the island wilds, going without sleep and living on the scantiest of rations to which weeks of rigid training had accustomed them.

The movements of the two groups were so noiseless and so well camouflaged that once they crept almost on each other. Each group thought the other was an enemy.

Headless of Fatigue. Only the calm, good judgment of their leaders and their previous instructions to wait until they were close enough to the enemy to use their knives if possible, prevented an armed clash before identification was made.

Headless of fatigue and hunger, the scouts studied the terrain of the Andreanofs foot by foot picking out the best landing beaches for the American Occupation Force, and the best spots for air-

Mrs. Nelson Niall is one of those women who, though very busy, takes time out to do what-ever else one asks her to do, if that something else is designed to help the war effort. She does Red Cross work, but the other day we found her collecting recipes for good and satisfying meatless dishes. She gave us her recipe for cheese soufflé, a favorite with her family, and she says her recipe is "fool-proof." In other words, this soufflé isn't temperamental.

Cheese Soufflé
2 heaping tablespoons flour
2 tablespoons butter
1-2 teaspoon salt
1-8 teaspoon pepper
1 cup milk
3 eggs
1 cup grated cheese
Make white sauce of flour, butter and milk. When thickened, stir in grated cheese until smooth—remove from fire and add well beaten yolks of 3 eggs. Then fold in stiffly beaten whites of eggs. Bake at 300 degrees for 30 minutes.

Planning Menus For the Week

Meal planning these days requires thought and ingenuity—in fact, it almost seems to need a touch of magic for those whose earnings have stayed on the old level while the cost of living has crept higher and higher! Rising food costs coupled with food scarcities makes the whole problem more complicated even for the experienced housewife—it is no longer "which do I want," but "what can I get." Both eggs and poultry are high, making it difficult to substitute them for the scarce "red" meats. Fortunately, there is still a good supply of vegetables and fruits; veal and lamb are available; liver, kidneys, smoked tongues and other glandular meats are fairly plentiful and lend themselves to many delicious combinations (see the kidney omelet in today's recipes). There is plenty of cheese. Coastal areas have plenty of fish. So after all, we have a pretty good list to choose from—the difficulty is in making available foods take the place of those less plentiful ones to which we have become accustomed. This I have tried to do in these menus.

SUNDAY: A veal shoulder will weigh about four or five pounds, and is a good buy as the leftover will make excellent croquettes and other dishes. Cornbread stuffing is grand with either pork or veal. Make it as follows: Crumble three stale corn muffins and mix with 1-2 cup chopped raw apple, 1 tablespoon minced onion, 1 cup soft stale breadcrumbs, 1-4 cup melted shortening, salt and pepper to season, 2 tablespoons finely cut celery or chopped celery leaves, and hot water to barely moisten. Have the bone removed from the shoulder and stuff with above mixture, tie firmly and roast in a moderate oven allowing 30 minutes per pound. Baste with 1/2 cup apple cider every hour. Mock hollandaise sauce is medium white sauce with a little extra butter or margarine and plenty of lemon juice.

MONDAY: Use cream style corn cooked with onions and diced raw potatoes then thinned with milk and seasoned with butter, salt, pepper and crumbled soda crackers to make the chowder for lunch. Do not peel the apples for the salad and use red ones for color contrast. Make up enough cooked salad dressing to keep on hand for other salads. For the croquettes, cut left-over meat into small dice to make 3 cups. Mix with 2 cups very thick white sauce and season with 1 tablespoon chili sauce, 1 tablespoon celery salt, 1 teaspoon Worcestershire and 1 teaspoon grated onion. Chill, shape into croquettes, roll in fine crumbs, beaten egg and fine crumbs again, then fry in deep hot fat until golden brown. Serve with Spanish sauce made as follows: Cook 2 tablespoons chopped onion and green pepper, 2 tablespoons chopped ripe olives and 4 tablespoons shortening together for 5 minutes, add 1 1/2 cups tomatoes, 1/2 teaspoon sugar, salt and pepper to season and boil gently for 25 minutes. Strain, thicken with 1 tablespoon flour mixed with cold water. Use part of a head of cabbage for the luncheon salad, saving the rest for next day's soup.

TUESDAY: Hard cook 4 eggs, and slice. Mix with 2 cups well seasoned white sauce, and serve over toast for breakfast. If available, garnish with 4 slices bacon cooked crisp and crumbled over the top. The luncheon soup is a delicious thick soup somewhat like a real Russian borscht but simpler to make. Canned beets or fresh cooked ones are used. Buy dark rye bread if possible to serve with the soup. "Cauliflower snow" is made by putting a whole cooked head of cauliflower through a potato ricer, piling it lightly in a hot vegetable dish. Save the stalks and the water in which it was cooked for soup.

WEDNESDAY: Make the apple cinnamon rolls served for breakfast the day before and reheat them before serving. Use scraps of fruit and fruit juice left over from last night's salad for the luncheon gelatin dessert. Cabbage again, this time seasoned sweet and sour and served with savory meat balls—see recipe with other cabbage suggestions elsewhere on this page.

THURSDAY: Use the bulk sausage meat for the sausage cakes, cooking it slowly in a heavy pan with a tablespoon or two of hot water. The water will quickly cook away and the sausage brown as usual, but it seems to prevent drying out too much. . . .

Baked Peppers

Green peppers stuffed with rice, cheese and vegetables make a delicious meat-saving dish. Cooked this way they pack a lot of vitamins into a small space!

Baked Stuffed Peppers
4 slices bacon, diced
4 tablespoons chopped onions
2 cans condensed vegetable soup
3 cups cooked rice
1 1/2 cups grated cheese
1-2 teaspoon salt
Pinch of pepper
6 tablespoons buttered crumbs
6 green peppers (medium size)

Cook diced bacon until brown. Remove bacon from fat and cook onions until soft. Put bacon back, add vegetable soup, cooked rice, grated cheese and seasonings, and mix thoroughly.

Wash peppers and cut a slice from stem end. Remove seeds leaving a clean shell. Drop in boiling salted water and cook about 5 minutes. Drain and stuff with the filling. Sprinkle buttered bread crumbs over the top and bake in a moderate oven 375, 25 to 30 minutes. Serves 6.

Toast rolls left over from Sunday breakfast to serve with salad for Sunday night. These may first be spread with a mixture of softened butter and grated cheese, using just enough butter to make a paste with the cheese.

New Ways With Cabbage

Cabbage now is plentiful and cheap, and it's the "Victory Food Special." The menus on this page call for these cabbage recipes:

Meat Balls with Sweet-sour Cabbage. For these you will need a medium sized head of fresh cabbage—one that weighs 2 to 3 pounds. Chopped veal is used for the meat balls or chopped chuck of beef if you can get it. For six portions buy 1-1-2 pounds of lean shoulder or shank of veal and have it chopped fine. Mix with 1-1-2 teaspoons salt, 1-4 teaspoon pepper, 3 slices stale bread squeezed through hot water, 1 teaspoon grated lemon peel and 3 tablespoons sour cream or thick sour milk. Mix all together and shape into small balls. Sprinkle lightly with flour and brown quickly in a little hot drippings. Meanwhile cut the cabbage in eighths, remove the core and cut the cabbage very fine. Put in a saucepan with 1 cup boiling water, 1-4 cup vinegar, 2 teaspoons salt, 1 teaspoon celery seeds or a pinch of fresh or dry dill and 2 tablespoons sugar. Cover and boil rapidly for 15 minutes, stirring once or twice. When the meat balls are brown, place them on top of the cabbage, pour 1-3 cup boiling water into the frying pan and rinse the fat into the cabbage. Cover, cook slowly 10 minutes longer and serve all together.

For the Mock Borscht you need half a head of cabbage cored and cut in shreds, a number 2 can of shoestring beets or 4 fresh beets cooked and cut in shreds, the juice from the canned or fresh cooked beets, 1 quart of boiling water, 3 bouillon cubes, 1 teaspoon grated onion, 2 tablespoons juice from sweet pickles or 2 tablespoons lemon juice. Heat the water, beet juice, onion to the boiling point, drop in the shredded cabbage, and the pickle juice or lemon juice, cover and boil 10 minutes. Add the beets, bouillon cubes and continue cooking, this time slowly for 15 minutes. Serve in soup plates with a spoonful of sour cream for each portion. Healthful, filling and super-delicious! Serve dark rye buttered bread with it.

Sauerkraut may be made in small quantities at home and stored in a stone crock or in jars. Take 10 pounds fresh, firm heads of cabbage. Remove outside discolored leaves, cut cabbage in quarters, remove cores and shred fine. Use 1-2 cup salt for the 10 pounds of cabbage, mixing it through the cabbage with your hands or with a large wooden spoon. Pack closely but without bruising, in a stone crock, packing it down well. Cover the cabbage with a cloth, then with a plate weighted down. Let stand for about 2 weeks or until fermentation ceases. Each day remove the cloth and rinse it and remove any skum that forms on top of the cabbage mixture. When the kraut is cured, drain, pack into clean hot jars, fill to overflowing with the kraut juice and seal immediately.

These are only a few of the ways you will find to use cabbage. Serve it in as many different forms as you can think of.

APPLE PIE WITH BUTTERY CRUST.
Sift 1-1-4 cups flour and add 3-4 teaspoon of salt. Cut in 1-2 cup shortening. Then add 4 or 5 teaspoons cold water, drop by drop, tossing lightly until dough holds together. Chill thoroughly. When chilled divide dough into two equal parts and roll out on lightly floured board. (If dough should break, patch it; under no circumstance should it be rolled again!) Roll it to fit pie plate, and dot it lightly with butter. Peel core and slice 2 pounds of tart apples. Mix into them 3-4 cup of sugar with cinnamon and nutmeg added, and place in pie shell. Roll out top crust, place over apples and flute edges to hold together. Dot top crust with butter, and pierce in several places for steam to escape. Bake in 350-degree oven until a golden brown.

W. Y. Atkinson Is Certified As Nominee

T. Hicks Fort Qualifies as Nominee for Superior Judge.

By Associated Press.
William Y. Atkinson, of Newnan, solicitor general of the Coweta circuit, was certified yesterday by Secretary of State John B. Wilson as the Democratic nominee for the state supreme court in the November 3 general election.

In a letter to Governor Talmadge, Wilson said he was filing the certification for the purpose of having Atkinson's name placed on the ballot "as provided by law." The state Democratic convention at Macon nominated Atkinson yesterday to succeed the late Justice Samuel C. Atkinson as the party candidate for the court post. The jurist, who was renominated in the September 9 primary, died Monday night.

Letter to Governor.
Wilson, in the same letter to the Governor, also certified T. Hicks Fort, Columbus attorney, as the Democratic nominee for judge of the Chattahoochee superior court circuit.

Fort recently was appointed by Talmadge judge of the circuit until January 1, after the death of Judge George Palmer. A special primary was called to select a Democratic nominee. Fort was the only candidate to qualify and the special primary, scheduled for October 5, was cancelled.

In view of the cancellation of the primary, Wilson previously had certified Fort along with other Democratic nominees. The state convention Wednesday formally nominated Fort together with other candidates.
Secretary Wilson also said yesterday he had received a letter from Edward T. McEvoy, of Savannah, demanding that he be placed on the November 3 general election ballot as an "Independent Republican" candidate for congress from the First district.

Follow the Law.
Wilson said he would not certify McEvoy, adding he had no desire to keep him off the ballot, but that he must follow the law.
McEvoy said that if he were refused a place on the ballot he would consider bringing legal proceedings and would contest the outcome of the election with Hugh Peterson, the incumbent and Democratic nominee.

Wilson earlier announced that McEvoy had failed to qualify because his application was received after last Saturday's midnight deadline and because of his identification of himself as an Independent Republican. He added that independents may qualify themselves, while Republican candidates must be certified by proper party authorities.
In his letter to Wilson, McEvoy said he was sure his application had arrived before midnight Saturday and added that he had a right to qualify as an Independent Republican. Wilson said the letter arrived in his office at 8:30 Monday morning.

Keep Scrap Flowing, Says Patterson

WASHINGTON, Oct. 8.—(AP)—Undersecretary Robert P. Patterson, of the War Department, predicted today that the nation-wide collection of scrap metal would meet the war needs of the steel industry "if the drive is continued at its present momentum."

Patterson stressed, however, that the campaign must not slacken before winter interferences.

He told his press conference that Army arsenals had made heavy contributions and were "cleaned out now."

"At the Aberdeen, Md., proving ground you won't see any more World War tanks and obsolete guns," he said.
The War Department and other war agencies, Patterson reported, are doing everything possible to increase the labor supply of copper mines, where he said a definite shortage existed. He noted the War Production Board had ordered closing down of gold production to free miners for the copper mines and that the Manpower Commission had ordered freezing of labor to prevent further diversion of workers to shipyards and other industries.

AWVS Plans Sense of Humor Chief Requisite For Life on Sub, Atlantan Says

Funds From Sales Will Go to Finance Activities of Group.

The AWVS headquarters at 251 Peachtree street will be converted to a real "jot 'em down" store tomorrow, and from 11 o'clock 'til dark, Atlanta bargain hunters will have a chance to be patriotic. Homemade cake and cookies will be featured in the pastry shop; there will be a costume jewelry counter for the fair sex; a special "husbands' haven," where real man-sized meals will be served, and many other special sales. The entire proceeds will be used to finance the various activities of the AWVS, which at present has 37 projects under way.

To add to the country fair atmosphere, a farmers' market will be set up in one corner, and old-fashioned herbs will be sold at the flower stand. Even the children will not be left out, for there will be a toy shop, too.

This AWVS fair is sponsored by two leading branches of the organization: the War Savings staff, under the direction of Mrs. Don Tatem, and the Motor Transport Group, which is headed by Mrs. Robert Neel.

Officials of the program are emphasizing the double value of the sale, pointing out that "you help yourself by purchasing real bargains, and at the same time help win your country's battle by putting some of your money into worth-while channels."

"We have the best food in the Navy," he stated, explaining that this is true since on a submarine there is less space for storing food. Thus fresh frozen vegetables and bottled meat, delicacies anywhere, are their "regular grub."

"But don't ever let anyone sell you on trying dehydrated potatoes," he warned. "They're so much like leather."

The following men were honored with stars:

Henry C. Grinstead, J. H. Barber Jr., James D. Coley, Herbert McNair, Eugene Horton, Louis Dalton Rhodes Jr., William Scarborough, Albert S. Taylor, Joseph R. Tucker, Justus T. Wright.

Those who participated were Consul Commander J. T. Morris, state adviser: L. H. Browning, Colonel L. A. Whipple, A. B. Quillian.

The speaker of the occasion was the Rev. J. M. Branch, past head consul of the state, of Davisboro.

Immediately before the exercises a box supper was served to visitors and members of the camp.

TWO FLIERS INJURED

In St. Simons Crash

NEW YORK, Oct. 8.—(AP)—A civil coastal patrol plane crashed at St. Simons Island, Ga., today, seriously injuring the pilot and observer, the Eastern Defense Command and First Army announced.

The announcement said that the plane crashed at the edge of the field just after the takeoff.

The accident occurred at 6:45 a. m. E. W. T.

Civil Air Patrol headquarters identified the injured as:

Ernest J. Jenkins, of Brunswick, Ga., the pilot, suffered a broken ankle; J. Roy Westland, of Jamestown, N. Y., the observer, received a broken arm.

JOINS WAVES.

BARNESVILLE, Ga., Oct. 8.—Miss Parrilee Brinson, the first WAVE recruit in Barnesville and Lamar county, left today for training at the University of Indiana. Miss Brinson is originally from Savannah, but has lived here several years.

Chief requisite for submarine sailors is a durable sense of humor, according to Yeoman First Class Brittain Ragsdale, of Atlanta, who is home on leave for the first time in two years.

The young Atlantan, who has seen action in the Pacific and the Caribbean sea, pointed out that "the close quarters necessary on a submarine are not the best possible environment for 'sensitive souls' who can't take a practical joke."

"You get to know everyone aboard intimately—more or less the same relationship exists as is true of one's college roommates or fraternity brothers. And there are the usual amount of jokes played on everybody," he said.

"For instance, it is customary to shellack parts of the deck ever so often . . . it sometimes seems to be a good idea to repeat this procedure when a new hand is snoring thereupon!" laughed the veteran of two years. "We just shellack the greenhorn to the deck."

"No, usually he won't wake up," admitted Yeoman Ragsdale. "Yes, it gets in his hair!" he punned, when asked how the victim reacted.

"It's funny, but we grow accustomed to waking up only to certain bells . . . other louder sounds or signals abroad we know not to wake up for. It becomes a habit," he explained, adding that there were other stand-by jokes that were pretty raw, but "you've got to be able to take it."

Yeoman Ragsdale enlisted in the submarine service in December, 1939. He thinks it is the best possible service, without reservations.

"We have the best food in the Navy," he stated, explaining that this is true since on a submarine there is less space for storing food. Thus fresh frozen vegetables and bottled meat, delicacies anywhere, are their "regular grub."

"But don't ever let anyone sell you on trying dehydrated potatoes," he warned. "They're so much like leather."

Local Board Members Visit Giant Power Plant

Officials and local board members of the selective service system yesterday visited Plant Atkinson, the giant steam-electric power station on the Chattahoochee river, and watched the work of the power plant.

After inspecting the 200,000-horsepower generating plant which is producing a large part of the electric energy for war production and military and civilian activities in Georgia, the draft officials and personnel heard from Preston S. Arkwright, president of the Georgia Power Company, a statement of the company's policy on applications for deferment of key employees from military service.

WOOD FOR FUEL.

SPARTA, Ga., Oct. 8.—Citizens of Hancock county are not particularly worried over the fuel oil shortage or coal since they have pine and oak wood or blocks from the planing mills in the various communities with which to heat their homes. In fact few families use fuel oil but many of them burn wood and coal.

WPB Closes 300 Gold Mines; Workers Freed for Vital Jobs

WASHINGTON, Oct. 8.—(AP)—Double-edged action to free 3,000 to 4,000 gold mine workers and channel them into mining operations more essential to the war effort was taken today by the War Production Board and the War Manpower Commission.

The WPB ordered a shutdown of the 200 to 300 largest mines in the United States and Alaskan gold industry, which produced a record $209,174,600 worth of gold last year.

The WMC followed with an order forbidding the hiring of the released workers without government approval in any state west of the Mississippi river or in Alaska, and directing the United States Employment Service to refer the freed miners to the Manpower-short copper, zinc and molybdenum mines.

WMC Chairman Paul V. McNutt added a promise that transportation expenses would be provided for shifted gold miners and "in some instances their families."

Leo Wertz, assistant to WMC's director of operations, said an allocation of $330,000 had been obtained from the President's emergency fund to pay the expenses

Off the Assembly Line

At the Ordnance Motor Base.

Keyless ignition switches are the latest vogue for Motor Transport vehicles. An amendment to which specification, has eliminated the key from the ignition switch and new Army vehicles coming off production lines will have a lever operated switch—just a little handle that flicks it on or off.

As for trucks already in the field, the same will be done for them—only in a different way—without any replacement switches handed out.

Ignition keys in the present trucks will be jammed right into the switches—through a little trick—so they'll stay there for the duration just in case a couple of soldiers named Mike in the middle of a combat situation jump in a truck and want to go somewhere in a hurry. They won't have to fidget around in pockets or worry about a key being lost. They'll go. They'll "Keep 'em rolling."

The little trick is accomplished by routing the smooth path taken by the tumblers. Specifically, with a small file, a slight notch in the key at the bottom of the first hill that enters the lock is cut, preventing the tumbler which sits in the valley just behind the last hill from sliding up when an effort is made to remove the key from the lock.

A strictly cash basis for personal purchase at Army posts.

"I BLESS THE DAY I GOT POW-O-LIN," STATES HAPPY WHITEHALL, GA., RESIDENT

Gassy Bloating, Smothery, Achy Feeling Made Life Miserable for Mrs. Toney. "Pow-o-lin Gave Me Welcome Relief from My Harassing Distress," She States.

Pow-o-lin is marking up success after success in bringing happy relief to well-known men and women throughout all Georgia and they come forward to gratefully endorse this splendid herbal medicine that others may profit by their happy experiences. Mrs. John N. Toney, well-known resident of Whitehall, Ga., near Athens, declares: "No matter what I ate I would suffer pain and distress from gas and bloating. The pressure at times would make me think my breath would surely be cut off. Headaches were frequent and my nerves seemed so on edge I was jumpy and irritable. The toxic wastes of constipation made me feel achy and sluggish and my housework and everything I tried to do seemed a burden. At night, I would roll and tumble hardly able to get an hour's sound sleep and morning would find me feeling as tired and let down as when I went to bed. I took harsh laxatives until I felt I couldn't stand another dose. I was awfully discouraged about myself. "Pow-o-lin brought blessed relief from my harassing distress. I bless the day I got this good medicine, for I am relieved of the gassy bloating, achy, sluggishness and haven't felt so good since a school girl. Pow-o-lin has my everlasting praise. It is the best medicine I ever saw."

Getting the Range at Fort Mac

Promotions announced yesterday at Fort McPherson were as follows: To private first class, Privates Lewis Chernoff, of Savannah; Ralph W. Mosher, of Atlanta; John Rizzo, of New York City, and Isadore Elkins, of Atlanta; to corporal, Private First Class James E. Noles, of Benton, Ky.; and to sergeant, Corporal James H. The old order changeth, yielding place to new at Fort McPherson. A huge wooden frame building, near the Fourth Service Command Motor Pool, which has been familiar to many Atlantans since it was first erected as a ward of Base Hospital No. 6 during the last war, is being torn down to make way for new barracks.

Andrew C. Petty, formerly employed in the advertising department of several Atlanta stores, has been made a private first-class at Fort McPherson, where he is stationed in the post intelligence office.

Need Sugar? Use No. 8 Ration Ticket

If you need the sugar, use your ration stamps while they are still good, the regional OPA advised yesterday.
Stamp No. 8—the only one on which purchases now may be made—expires October 31. No. 9 will be good for three pounds November 1 through December 15, continuing the present half pound per week rate, it was announced.
Consumers who do not need the sugar allowed on any one stamp should not buy it, but the OPA emphasized that they cannot expect to use the stamp after it has expired.

BRING YOUR SUGAR.

MONTEZUMA, Ga., Oct. 8.—At the luncheon of the Music Club this week, hands went furiously into purses and drew out little white packets, from which was poured a small quantity of a granular white substance. No, the members are not hoarding. They like sugar in their coffee, and the ration board couldn't issue any to the hostesses.

Major General Russell L. Maxwell advised the War Department that damage from near misses of American bombs and other unobserved destruction probably raised this total of the havoc wrought on the enemy.

In a report summarized by Undersecretary Robert P. Patterson, the American Army commander in the Middle East said the airmen had loosed 3,161,000 pounds—about 1,580 tons—of bombs in the past 110 days. Of these 969,000 pounds were dropped during September alone.

Many Independent Raids.
The American air fighters operated with Britain's Royal Air Force in support of British forces battling General Erwin Rommel's desert army, but the report indicated they operated independently in many of their far-ranging attacks in the eastern Mediterranean on enemy shipping and supply ports.

Under the immediate command of Major General Lewis H. Brereton, chief of American air forces on the Egyptian front, four-engine B-24 Liberator bombers carried out 77 missions between June and the close of September.

Medium bombers, North American B-25 two-engine craft of the type used to raid Tokyo, carried out 13 missions in scouring Axis supply lines in Africa.
Freight vessels included in the shipping toll ranged in size from 2,500 to 10,000 tons, Maxwell said. In addition, attacks on Tobruk, Benghazi and other ports resulted in the destruction of small Axis boats and lighters, along with warehouses, ammunition dumps and oil storage tanks.

Ranged to Greece.

The Liberator bombers ranged as far as Navarino Bay in Greece and Suda Bay in Crete. Their raids included an attack on June 15 on Italian fleet detachments.

American combat losses virtually matched the foe's, Maxwell said. American bombers destroyed six enemy planes, probably destroyed seven more and damaged eight, aside from "probably a very considerable number" destroyed on the ground.

Definite American combat losses sustained from the fire of enemy planes were two heavy bombers and two fighters, but a third heavy bomber and four medium craft were listed as missing and probably lost. Altogether, including losses by anti-aircraft fire, American combat losses were put at five B-24 and six B-25 bombers and eight P-40 fighters.
